'Ban on China to hurt US textile producers'

BEIJING, June 3: China said Sunday the trade sanctions Washington has threatened to impose on Beijing from June 17 in retaliation for piracy of intellectual property will also hurt US textile traders and producers, reports Reuter.

The China Daily Business Weekly quoted a Chinese textile trade official as saying the sanctions would also affect US manufacturing joint ventures in China.

"If the industry can't gain foreign exchange by exporting textiles to the US it will be unable to buy raw materials from the US," the newspaper quoted Liu Zenghui, Vice-Chairman of the China Chamber of Commerce for Textile Imports and Exports, as saying.

"This will surely hurt the interests of traders and producers doing business with China," he added.

The two countries have agreed to further talks in Beijing on June 6 and 7 in an attempt to resolve the row before the deadline, when tit-for-tat sanctions are due to come into effect.

The measures Washington has threatened include 100 per cent tariffs on a broad range of Chinese exports, including garments, textiles and electronic goods.

If the sanctions take effect, Liu said US garment producers funding joint ventures in China will also lose profits because some of their products are on the sanction list."

The paper said the proposed sanctions came at a time when Chinese textile exports to the United States were dropping sharply, while US textiles going to China were rising.

Dollar eases in Tokyo

TOKYO, June 3: The dollar eased in light trading today, with investors firmly focused on US, German and Japanese interest rate trends in the near term, dealers said, reports AFP.

Although the market may be 'basically bullish' on the dollar, investors "do not appear willing to build fresh mid-term positions" at present, said a dealer with first National Bank of Chicago.

Towards the end of trading, the dollar was quoted at 107.85 yen here Monday afternoon, down from 108.12 yen in New York late Friday and 108.27 yen here Friday afternoon.

Against the mark, the US unit traded at 1.5212, compared with 1.5234 in New York late Friday an 1.5352 here Friday afternoon.

US investors "have decided to wait for the Tankan" to determine future direction amid a lack of other fresh incentives, the first National Bank of Chicago dealer said.

Most Asia-Pacific units fall over the week

HONG KONG, June 3: The Australian dollar made strong gains against the greenback during the week, although most other currencies in the region remained weak, reports AFP.

AUSTRALIAN DOLLAR: The Australian dollar made strong gains over the week, but analysts said they expected the currency to now enter a period of consolidation after pushing the 80 US cent mark in recent weeks.

The Aussie ended at 79.87 US cents from 79.04 US cents last week.

State Bank of New South Wales acting chief economist Craig James said the Australian dollar should continue near its current levels in the week ahead.

"We expect limited downslide for the Australian dollar in the coming week," James said.

Citibank chief economist Grant Bailey said the local unit should consolidate around these levels in the near term.

On the central Reserve Bank of Australia's trade weighted index, a basket of major trading currencies, the local unit ended at 58.7 points from 57.9 the previous week.

JAPANESE YEN: The yen eased during the week, continuing to hold its weaker tone following comments by a Finance Ministry official on the currency's possible drop.

The Japanese unit stood at 108.27 yen to the dollar in late afternoon Friday, down from 106.92 a week earlier.

The Finance Ministry's International Finance Bureau head Eisuke Sakakibara said a week ago that the dollar could rise to the 130 yen level, boosting dollar-buying sentiment during the week, dealers said.

The decline in the yen was also due to expectations of continued low interest rates in Japan, dealers said.

NEW ZEALAND DOLLAR: The New Zealand dollar closed Friday worth 67.90 US cents, down on the 68.38 cents closing of a week earlier.

A national bank business confidence survey, made public Friday, for the first time in five years reported a net of respondents who were pessimistic.

In addition, the market was concerned that budget forecasts for economic growth were on the high side, a dealer said.

SINGAPORE DOLLAR: The Singapore dollar ended the week higher against the US dollar, to 1.4075 from 1.4095 previously.

The greenback reached a high of 1.4125 Singapore dollar mid week before its strength fizzled out, dealers said.

HONG KONG DOLLAR: The Hong Kong dollar ended the week at 7.7361-7.7371 to the US dollar, up slightly from the previous week's level of 7.7352-7.7362.

INDONESIAN RUPIAH: The Indonesian currency closed trading on Friday at 2,354 rupiah to the dollar, three rupiah weaker than at the close on Friday the previous week.

MALAYSIAN RINGGIT: The ringgit eased seven points against the greenback to close at 2.4970 this week from 2.4900 a week earlier in quiet trading ahead of a long weekend, dealers said.

The Malaysian currency was also lower against the Singapore dollar at 1.7738 from 1.7701 and against the yen at 2.3237 from 2.2994.

PHILIPPINE PESO: The Philippine peso declined against the US dollar this Friday, closing at 26.203 against the greenback from 26.180 on May 24.

SOUTH KOREAN WON: The won weakened from 778.70 won per dollar a week ago to 787.90 won to the greenback on Saturday as South Korea's current account deficit grows.

TAIWAN DOLLAR: The Taiwan currency slumped to close Friday at 27.672 Taiwan dollars against the US dollar, down 25.4 Taiwan cents from the previous week's finish of 27.418.

As the central bank stayed out of the local foreign exchange market, coupled with the greenback's recent robust performance in overseas markets, the local unit hit 27.892, is lowest level since January 1989, market dealers said.

The central bank said it would not intervene while the market was moving on anormal track.

THAI BAHT: The Bank of Thailand's exchange equalisation Thursday fixed the official mid-rate at 25.34 baht to one US dollars compared to the previous week's close of 25.33 baht, dealers at the Thai Farmers Bank said.

Eddie George (L), Governor of the Bank of England, gestures to Jean-Claude Trichet (R), Governor of the Banque de France, as Bernie Fraser (C), Governor of the Reserve Bank of Australia, looks on during the 1996 International Monetary Conference in Sydney on Saturday. Greenspan satisfied with progress of US economy

SYDNEY, June 3: US Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan indicated yesterday he was satisfied with the progress of the American economy, showing stronger than expected growth, according to informed sources at an international monetary conference here, reports Reuter.

However, the sources, who attended a Greenspan briefing by video link to Washington, said he indicated that growth was not so strong as to cause concern about inflation.

One source said he thought Greenspan sounded "rather sanquine" about inflation in his private talks to commercial and central bankers attending the conference.

Greenspan did not take part in a news conference after the closed-door session because of the late hour in Washington.

Earlier, a senior delegate said Greenspan was asked about a risk of a rise in interest rates as a result of the strong US economy. But he did not reply directly.

Greenspan "used Greenspan language" which made delegates none the wiser, Industrial Bank of Japan President Yoh Kurosawa told reporters. "His answer, as usual, was very unclear."

Germany's Bundesbank President Hans Tietmeyer, who also appeared via satellite, was not asked specifically about current economic conditions during the closed-door session and did not offer an opinion, the sources said.

The sources said the bankers concentrated their discussions on issues such as sovereign debt problems in Latin American and Russia, the independence of European central banks and proposed closer ties among Asia-Pacific central banks.
