Dollar falls to multi-week low against euro

AFP, London

The dollar struck a near-seven week low against the euro on Tuesday as safe-haven demand for the greenback declined on prospects for an improvement in the battered global economy, dealers said.

The European single currency jumped to 1.3670 dollars -- the highest point since March 24. In later trading here, the euro was at 1.3658 dollars, up from 1.3585 dollars late on Monday in New York.

Against the Japanese currency, the dollar gained to 97.73 yen from 97.50 yen late Monday.

The dollar had slipped against the yen in Asian trade as safe-haven demand for the greenback declined on hopes of an improvement in the battered global economy, dealers said.

The US currency was hit by profit-taking on gains sparked by demand for assets seen as a relatively safe bet during the economic crisis, Mitsubishi UFJ Trust and Banking dealer Hideaki Inoue said.

Many market watchers believe the dollar is likely to decline against most rival currencies in the coming months as risk aversion recedes.
