Centre for Asian Arts and Cultures' seminar on Jasimuddin

HARUN UR RASHID

In Memoriu

UR country is not accustomed to properly evaluating one's contribution: people in Bangladesh often say this out of anguish, which is not entirely untrue. With such a tone in its presentation, Centre for Asian Arts and Cultures (CAAC) recently arranged a seminar at the Public Library , on the topic 'Jashimuddin and National literature.' Presided over by poet Foyez Ahmed, the seminar presented three theses on poet Jasimuddin on occasion of his centennial anniversary (1903-2003). The theses were presented by Moinuddin Khaled, teacher of Bangla at Dhaka City College, and Salimullah Khan, Chief Editor of Rashtroshobha Patromala--a literary journal brought out by Ahmad Sofa Rashtroshobha., Dr Jamal Anowar, the poet's son, a businessperson Abdul Haque, reputed photoiournalist Nasir Ali Mamun, and others were present at the seminar and discussed on Jashimuddin. Rashtroshobha Patromala brought out its third issue on this occasion, which contained the theses and other writings on the 'Polli-Kobi' and a few of his photographs

Poet Jasimuddin himself was a man of simplicity, kindness and passion. He wrote his nature poems in a simple language about the simple people living in the villages of Bangladesh. He himself had connections with villages throughout his life, and he took his subjects for his poetry from the ordinary day-to-day lives of rural people. His characters are always throbbing with the simplicity and freshness of nature. In Jasimuddin's poems the very nature with all its elements guage and subject matter of poetry, is completely 'national' in nature. In this context, he explained that by the word 'national' he meant 'connection to both nation and its people'. Salimullah quoted from various documents to show how we have undermined Jashimuddin at times. He read from the en-tongue of the rural people, tries on 14th and 16th March Jashimuddin was lovingly called 'Polli-Kobi' (folk poet).

Salimullah Khan, who pre-Jashimuddin's Bangla and Jasimuddin and the National literature, however, denounced Jasimuddin and thus excluding softened images drawn from nature, his passionate expressions are more romantic which the young poets of the time are elements to be much more fond Moinuddin Khaled also presented arguments in favour of Jasimuddin's 'national' qualities. He said that practice of literature expressing compassion for the mass people, while living in the city, cannot be true.

Mamun came with an invaluable gift for the audience and admirers of Jasimuddin. He played a record of recitation of the poem

There is no denying that Jasimuddin is one of the best poets our country has produced. And it is necessary for our own interest to evaluate him rightly. The language we express ourselves with, the literature we have inherited, is enriched with the contribution of Jasimuddin along with that of many others. Jamal Anowar, the poet's son, hoped that the poet's village home could be turned into a museum so that people may visit and see things connected with the poet. He said, No government has yet taken any initiative. Can we hope that such measures will be taken soon by our government to preserve the invaluable treasures we have, before they are rousing reception was accorded to Bangladeshi humanist and modern mystic poet and lyricist Sabir Ahmed Chowdhury by the Meghdut Cultural Center of Kolkata, recently, at its 19th founding anniversary in Kolkata Mahajati Sadan . On the occasion a grand cultural function included recitation and discussions on the humanist ideals of his poetical works. The very theme of the oneness of humanity from the poet's following lyrics pervaded the whole gamut of the musical performances and songs along with dance-drama made the huge gatherings spell-bound.

The poet was the chief guest of the function while the special guests were Dr Sanat Kumar Mitra, Dr Hari Prasad Sengupta, Madan Kumar Mitra and Tarapada Das -- the noted literature and researchers. It was presided over by Mr Suvankar Chakrovarty.

Most of the speakers dwelt on the humanitarian aspects of the popular lyrics of the poet while speaking against parochial and communal antagonism among
