only about the war of 1941-1945 exactly, but about any war, its devastating force sweeping away the natural course of things. The film is based upon documental facts and 'The Khatyn Story' by Ales Adamovich

The authors describe the place and events which became a symbol of national tragedy. The hero of the film is Flyora, a sixteen-year-old boy that turned to the woods to help the partisans. At the beginning he is just a kid. Then he lives through the horror of the Nazi executions and becomes amazingly grown-up, and even old. The war had distorted the once tender childish facial features it's all wrinkles now. The altered face of Flyora is the face of War. The authors were so true-tolife, uncompromising and austere as to portray in the cnetre of the film not some grown-up man, but an unexperienced kid with his

Ballad of a Soldier Description: This film had a triumphant run over the world's movie screens. The main hero is a Russian soldier, Alyosha Skvortsov, one of the many who made the victory over Fascism possible. He is neither an action movie hero, nor a conqueror. This simple boy, who was panicstricken at the first sight of an enemy tank, overcomes his fear and manages to hit two enemy machines. However, battle scenes do not take much of the film's time. For his fighting exploits Alyosha is awarded a two-day's leave to visit his mother. He meets many different people on his way and is ready to help everybody. That leaves him just a few minutes to spend with his mother -- a few words a hug, and he is off for the front again... to never the come back.

Celebrating 'Ekushay'

LONG with the country, North South University had observed the National Mother Language Day, now referred to as the International Mother Language Day, on February 21. Students outfitted in black and white apparels mingled in with the Dhaka swarm and carried the pride in the simple fact that they could all speak in their very own language. Rather than the grief which would hang on with the mass, this year's 'Ekushay' carried spirit; the courage to go out and face the adversary; the pride and delight in speaking Bangla in a free and independent state.

rated from her child and the voice of the dead innocents speaking out. The attraction in the show was probably the reading of the diary of a soldier which actually brought tears to many eyes, especially the ones who could relive the agonising moments all over again. This extraordinary script was written and compiled by Misho and read out by Naeem. The show continued with popular patriotic songs namely Moder Gorob Moder Asha, Amori Bangla Bhasha by Gaazi and Ek Shagor Rokter Binimoye sung by Kanti. Two popular patriotic numbers namely Karar oi loho kopa and Shikol porar chol were performed by Russel, Rintu, Gaazi, Omi, Samina,

The day had begun with preparng banners and posters carrying slogans, by the members of North South University Sangskritik Shongothon (NSUSS). NSUSS finally got ready to begin their show at the BTA tower. The audience filled with students and members of the faculty, including the Vice Chancellor Hafiz Siddiqui, got into the mood and pinned up a Bangla letter each to portray their loyal sentiments. The students had planned to depict the chronological events of the Language movement from 1952 to 2003.

The show began with a skit where a razakar, played by Muheeb, apologises to the soul of an innocent martyr. It followed on with a few recitations namely Kumro Phule Phule, performed by Samina and Rizwan, depicting the Fariha Lisa Tayseer and Kanti In the middle of the show. anchor Naeem put forward the auestion of whether the feeling of nationalism will linger on even after the 21st of February, to which many students and faculty members answered and spoke their minds. A peppy patriotic song composed by NSU student Topu and performed by Topu and Elita got the crowd snapping and tapping their feet. Imran's guitar work and Mashrur's tabla added in and gave everyone a treat. The show came to an end with a beech from the faculty advisor K.M. Elias and the VC Hafiz Siddiqui and finally with Aamar bhaiyaer rokte rangano ekushey February, aami ki Bhulite paari.
