Smudges of idyllic forms

Tahera Khanam's solo at "Chitrak"

FAYZA HAQ

AHERA Khanam, who was one of the first women students to graduate from the Art College, and happens to be the well-known artist Qayyum Chowdhury's wife, has brought in her old works and new ones at her recent exhibition at "Chitrak".

On the cover of her brochure she has the painting of many trees, some of whom have reddish brown large leaves instead of green ones and have trunks of black and brown. Next to them and behind them are more clumps of trees in pink, yellow, blue and green. These are touched with copper and mauve. "I have painted as I felt and did not always adhere to the reality around me, and have brought in houses along with nature in this work," Tahera said. The "Bari' is based in Ryerbazar potter's area and the brown huts and blue green trees along with the rows of grass clumps belonging to the simple people who lived here in 1957 in peace and harmony. There is then the Guru Shiv Mandir area that is covered with massive trees and their yellow and green leaves. A few sketched figures are brought in the romantic grassy area below. The trees and leaves are outlined with black. There is then the landscape based near the race course where the olive, dark green and brown leaves give way to rows of pale blue trees that line the race course. In front is a broad pathway in soft burnt sienna and blue-green.

In "Khelay mogno" one saw children in white playing with a background of scattered red and orange flowers with their green setting. Animals too are brought into the happy scenario along with flying kites in the distance which are shown as swirling all around the figures of the children. "Prokiti o romoni" brings a woman in a blue sari lying down. Her arms and face are yellow. There are two other women at the bottom, at one side, and they hold on to birds and flowers. There is an animal and red, blue and green leaves in front. At the back there are more trees. In "Dupure bisram" brings another resting female figure. She is dressed in yellow while her sheets are blue and red. There are flowers in a vase next to her and in a jug close to her and more in the forefront. There is a tub of flower plants forms of rectangles and triangles with interweaving twining plants. "Phul hatey romoni" similarly glorifies women with a nude in gray

too. The window is brought in the and brown, with green bosoms, sitting on a wicker chair and she is surrounded by shades of pink, green and mauve. Another female nude is brought in "Nognika" in shades of ochre, green, brown as she lies on a blue backdrop. There is tree brought to one side, a crow on top of her head, and geometrical patterns all around her in green, black, brown and yellow. "Godhuli" brings in the evening sky in gray, blue, pink with trees and large plants with white, red and orange blossoms. In front is water with pink fish and a deer standing beside it. In between is the figure of a woman and on top perches a bird. 'Navok naveka" brings in a woman with vellow and ochre face and hands and she appears to be floating. The man, done in yellow and green, appears to be in the nude, while at the back are flowers in red, olack and orange.

"Prokitey romoni" brings in a woman in a sari with a red border and around her are blue floating fish, birds, red flowers. In the background are strokes of gray, beige orange. "Chinta" shows a seated woman with flowers around her with strokes of mauve and yellow. Around her are sketched in lines of blue, gray and mauve. "Ghora" presents a black horse with a flower in front. The rest of the picture is sketched in green, red and black. The sky on top is streaks of yellow and blue. The ground is in splashes of mauve, pink and

"Oshorohi" takes us to a woman with long floating hair seated on a horse done in purple and black. The woman is in shades of brown and pink. All along are trees done in flecks of green and red while the sky is done in dabs of blue. "Lota pata phul" takes us to one of Tahira's favourite themes of nature with mingling and mixing of many leaves and flowers in a horizontal way and done in green, blue, red and gray, with bits of green in between. "Grisho" is delineated by a seated woman with her top part bare, and wearing something pink in the lower half. She sits on a wicker chair dotted with blue. There are sweeps of green and brown around her along with floral motifs in front and back. Included in the composition is a vase of

In Tahera Khanam's works we see the attempts of a woman who took to painting in a serious way many decades back but did not take up her career too seriously sacrificing it to the demands of a growing family.

Endeavour

A world of children's books

CULTURE DESK

INY tots, all aged between 3 to 12, witnessed February 26 a dream come true, as it came into their lives with a promising hope, when World of Children's books (WCB), a publishing organisation for children, held a publication ceremony of Aamader Lekha Aamader Anǩa containing stories, rhymes as well as illustrations by some children. The book presents literary and art work that won places in a competition 'Galpo Lekho, Chhobi Anko' organised by WCB on February 7. A total of sixteen stories and twenty drawings have been selected from that competition for the book. Artist Rafiqun Nabi and litterateur-journalist Rahat Khan handed out prizes amongst the winners of the competition on February 26 at the premises of Institute of Fine Arts, Dhaka University. The book Amader Lekha Amader Anka portrays pictorial stories, representing children and their ideas. Stories like Mach Dhora Boroi Moja talks about a child who had a wonderful time fishing in the village, or Bhuter Golpo tells the readers about a witch who lived a long time ago. Shingho o ekti Idur personifies with real life human beings and shows the imaginary relationships between the two animals.

It will not be inappropriate to say that this book has the potential to add a new dimension to the book market in the country. For, there are very few books by children out there. Aamader Lekha Aamader Anka is a glimpse of the colourful world of the children, their imaginative faculty and its potentiality, the kids' hopes and desires, often hidden deep inside their hearts. The book may stand out as an 'open letter' to the elder world.
