Bronze masks to relieve the gloom

Ivy Zaman's solo exhibition at Shilpangan

FAYZA HAQ

IVY Zaman has taken to sculpture for years now and shapes her ideas and forms that she sees into bronze and terracotta...

as an artist and even more difficult as a sculptor. She has had a solo exhibition before at Gallery 21, and at Shilpangan...

Ivy Zaman has transformed the shadows of trees and houses in a moonlight night into massive curls and lines in blue and black...

Another mask brings in "surjokonna" in a combination of the abstract and what the artist sees in real life. It looks like a Hindu figure with a knot on top of the head...

entire mask is like a circle. Beard, lips, large eyes and hair tied on top are brought in the next creation...

A provoking scene is created in another room. Here we see figures made out of metal rods, netting and paper on top...

at one side and the red light in the room. The terracotta shapes in another room bear shapes that Ivy has created when she is weary of bronze casting...

Three faces on three sides are seen in the next sculpture piece in the form of curves and rectangular shapes. A bird with folded overlapping wings at the sides is seen in another creation...

brings in a bird sitting on the head of a person, while faces have been brought in the other forms with squiggles and lines.

Ivy's work is a brave step into the world of modern sculpture.

For Hayek, 'Frida' brought fame but no fortune

REUTERS, Mexico City

MEXICAN actress Salma Hayek said on Monday that while her controversial film portrayal of artist Frida Kahlo was a high point in her career, financially it was a losing proposition for her.

"I didn't make one dollar. I lost a lot of money, though I got a lot of other things," she said of her Oscar-nominated work in "Frida."

"I'm not complaining, but economically this film ... was a loss," she told reporters in Mexico's capital, where she was honored by the government and thousands of fans over the weekend.

Hayek, 36, said Disney's Miramax Films paid her a salary of only $2,000 for her depiction of the Mexican surrealist painter...

Salma Hayek

an Oscar as best actress in the award's 75-year history. This quieted Mexican critics who labeled the movie "Frida of Hollywood" for taking literary license with history and for the film's commercial aspects...

"I'm happy with just the nomination. I could die now knowing I was the first Mexican nominated as best actress," said Hayek, who began her career in Mexican soap operas...
