Collingwood to be off for long

England one-day international allrounder Paul Collingwood is set to be out of action for two months after dislocating a shoulder.

The Durham medium-pace bowler and middle-order batsman injured his left shoulder when diving to field the ball during a one-day friendly against Lancashire at Old Trafford last week.

It had been thought that Collingwood, 26, would be out for six weeks but joint damage has been diagnosed and this will require keyhole surgery.

That means time is against Collingwood if he wants to be fit for England's three-match one-day series against Pakistan in June and the triangular series involving Zimbabwe and South Africa which follows.

Collingwood established himself as a regular member of England's oneday side during the Ashes tour of Australia and at the World Cup earlier this year after making his debut in

The West Indies selectors on Friday named a 14-man squad for the third Test against Australia starting at the Kensington Oval in Bridgetown, Barbados from May 1.

Opener Chris Gayle is recalled to the squad after being overlooked for the first two matches while Wavell Hinds and David Bernard drop out.

The West Indies trail 2-0 in the fourmatch series having lost the first Test in Georgetown by nine wickets and the second in Port of Spain by 118 runs. "My approach in the remaining matches will be very positive," said

Windies skipper Brian Lara. "I am very optimistic about our batting in the remaining matches but in the bowling we need to do some work to limit the Australians.

"In the next Test, we will have more options and we should not get too carried away. We are playing against the best team in the world and trying too much could be a problem

Surely the performance of the top order of Bangladesh will go a long way to convince the cricket world that given time, this young cricketing nation can become another competitive country from the subcontinent. Players like Omar and Bashar have shown the way today in Chittagong. While the result will surely go the way of South Africa, the manner in which the hosts made them work has not gone unnoticed.

The bowling performances will come under scrutiny when the next team is selected and surely Willoughby will be in the firing line. His lack of swing, pace and ability to make things happen were very evident. Dawson, who is the other backup seam bowler, will always deliver a quality performance and brings more options to the team. The declaration also left him 25 runs short of Martin Crowe's New Zealand record of 299, also against Sri Lanka at Wellington in 1991. "The record had crossed my mind but I would have had to take some risks," a tired, but happy Fleming said later.

"I had always wanted us to get 500 and have a go at the Sri Lankans late in the evening. It all panned out the way we

Fleming, who came in to bat after 45 minutes on the first day, was involved in three big partnerships that lifted the Kiwis beyond the 500-run mark.

Having put on 172 for the second wicket with Mark Richardson on Friday, Fleming added 157 for the fourth with Scott Styris (63) and 79 for the fifth with Jacob Oram (33). Styris, who himself escaped one chance, smashed five boundaries and two sixes before he was caught in the deep off Kumar Dharmasena just before Sri Lanka's trump card, Muttiah Muralitharan, went wicketless for 54 overs before he finally had success when Oram holed out to mid-wicket in the final session. The off-spinner then dismissed Robbie Hart to finish with unflattering figures of 2-140 from 58.5 overs. Dharmasena was the most successful bowler with 3-132. With six catches dropped in the first two sessions - four of them by Mahela Jayawardena in the slips - the Sri Lankan bowlers were frustrated in their attempt to curtail the New Zealand first innnigs. Early in the day, Prabath Nissanka allowed a hooked skier from Fleming to drop in front of him at deep fine-leg and even let the ball through for a boundary.

Then when Fleming miscued another hook shot, Jayawardena ran back from slip and got under the skier, but could not grasp the difficult catch. Fleming moved from 121 to 140 when he survived again, this time

Jayawardena fumbling an edge off

debutant leg-spinner Kaushalya

Lokuarachchi.

Jayasuriya was also guilty of a missed chance as he spilled a catch at gully off Mathew Sinclair.

The error, however, did not prove costly as three runs later Sinclair was caught at short-leg off Dharmasena for 17, ending a third-wicket stand of 43 with Fleming.

Jayawardena, normally a reliable slip fielder, missed Styris twice on 16 and 57 to let the Kiwis off the hook.
