Interview

The making of a Moliere play

"Georges Dadin ou le mari Confondu" at Alliance Francaise

FAYZA HAQ

ASHIM Das says about his play "Georges Dadin ou le mari Confondu", that was seen recently at Alliance Francaise open air stage, "The plot is that of a tragic-comedy that revolves around Georges Dadin, who is an average farmer who has married to Angelique, who belongs to the aristocracy and whose family had enormous wealth at one time. Georges had believed that by marrying above his class he would stand to gain and Angelique's parents had accepted him because of his accumulated wealth. However, Angelique, coming from a feudal background cannot assimilate with Georges's simple life. Angelique and Georges do not get along and ultimately he commits suicide out of frustration and inability to cope with situations that arise, i.e. Angelique's clandestine attachment with the count. He tries to prove his wife's disloyalty to her parents but fails miserably to do so: his ego and self respect are dashed to smithereens."

Elaborating on the other characters, Das says, "With Angelique come her parents. At George's house is a maidservant, Claudine, who helps Angelique with her affair with the count. Lubin is the count's servant and of course there is the count who brings desperation and misery in George's life."

He adds, "The setting is a large old house, which once belonged to some landlord, and which Georges had bought in order to renovate. Some action takes place beside the stage, at times, and such as when the forest is brought in by movable props."

Das continues about the theme, "The play, set in the 16th century, presents the conflict between the classes in France. It is something like Anton Chekhov's 'Cherry Orchard'."

Asked about the problems that he had faced in making the play, Das says, "I didn't find the translation easy to follow. I got it from the Chittagong Alliance Francaise and it was by Arup Rudro and Chinmoy Guho from Kolkata. I had no English translation to fall back on, and don't know French myself that I could read the original text. However, Emmanuel Bottiau, Director of the Chittagong Alliance Francaise, helped me to alter the translation. I have read quite a bit of Moliere and felt that I could make interpretations of my own such as in the nocturnal meeting between the count and Angelique in the forest and during the scene between George and Angelique in Act 1, Scene 3 where Georges chafes her for not being a faithful wife and she says that she is young and wants to taste life. The ending in the original translation was too brief so I elaborated it somewhat. In my play Georges talks at length about his dream being shattered and when there is no hope in sight for him he hangs himself from a mango tree in his orchard."

"I did not have problems with the costume as earlier I had done some period plays for Moliere such as 'Le Mariage Force' which I called 'Bye Birombona' and Carlo Goldoni's 'Servant of Two Masters'. Some of the actors are from my own 'Fame School of Dance Drama and Music' while some are from the Alliance Francaise, Chittagong. Out of the seven actors, six are from my own school."

"I have enough experience in presenting plays in Dhaka, such as 'Itihash Kotha Ko', 'The Servant of Two Masters' and so had the confidence to bring this play to Dhaka. I used only one setting but the space is broken as the acting is done on the sides of the stage and along the aisles of the sitting space."

Asked to elaborate on his earlier experiences Das said, "I've been on stage since my schooldays and in 1994 went to the National School of Drama, New Delhi, with an Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) scholarship. There I did a three year diploma course. So far I've done 16 plays such as 'Archangels don't play pinball', 'Le Mariage Force' and 'Noti Binodini'."

Dwelling on how his family takes his immersion in drama, Das says, "I have a Masters in Management but gave up my career in that field. My wife, a 'kathak' performer, Tilotma Sengupta, encourages me, while my parents too are used to my interest in plays. I'm inspired mostly by the masters Shakespeare, Tagore and Ibsen. In Bangladesh, I think Dr. Jamil Ahmed and Mamunur Rashid have contributed the most towards the development of stage plays."

He adds, "It is not easy for me to pursue this career as financially, so far I have had to rely on the fees from my school of drama for a living. Merely presenting plays is just not enough."

Talking about his actors and actresses, Das says, "Angelique is played by Hema Borua, who has done plays like 'Roktokorobi' and 'Ekjon Lohindor', has been doing plays for four years. The role of Georges Dadin is played by Al Noman who has about four years experience in the world of drama. He has done about eight plays like Abdullah Al Mamun's 'Tomrai acho', 'Shopno bodh' ('Archangels don't play pinball') and 'Noti Binodini'. Md Saifur Rahman, who plays the role of Georges's father-in-law was once a student of the 'Bodhon Abriti School' (Chittagong). Shutopa Borua acts as Angelique's mother and has been in the theatre world for ten years."

A Tabla player's mind

Milon Bhattachariya speaks about the scope and prospects of Tabla playing

NOVERA DEEPTA

I started playing Tabla when I was only five years old," said Tabla player Milon Bhattachariya. "My guru was Late Ustad Kanailal Das and I learned to play Tabla under his tutelage for about 17 years. He was my first guru. After that my guru was Ustad Aditya Narayan Das who was in the Ariya Sangit Academy in Chittagong."

Milon Bhattachariya was a child prodigy who used to play at the children's programme on the Radio Pakistan. Milon said, "It was about 40 years ago when I used to play Tabla with my elder sister Protima who was a singer. From then on people involved with the cultural activities used to contact me for accompaniment at various programmes."

"The main inspiration of my playing was my father Dhirendralal Bhattachariya. Without his inspiration it would have been difficult to reach at the position of a tabla player which I am today," Milon said that during the liberation war he used to learn Tabla under Biplob Chatterjee for three months at the Rabindra Sharnoni of Calcutta.

In the early years Milon was a staff artiste at the radio station of Dhaka, but nowadays he plays for audiocassettes, cinema and television. He played in almost all the cinemas of the country since 1973.

Milon Bhattachariya

About audiocassettes he said, "I played Tabla for audiocassettes and probably the number might exceed five or six hundred."

According to Milon the satellite channels have opened many opportunities for the instrument players including Tabla. He said, "The scope of playing for programmes and audiocassettes have created wider opportunities for the musicians as a whole."

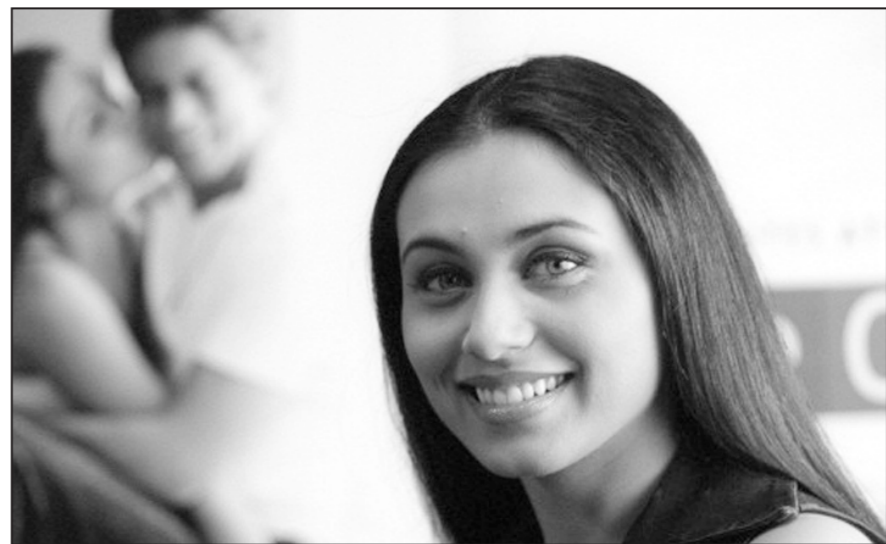

"Tabla was not used so widely before. There were drums with which the effect of Tabla was carried on," Milon said, "But I tried hard to establish Tabla in this field. There was disrespect for the Tabla players along with the instrument for a long time. But the situation has changed now, Tabla as well as the players are now seen with esteem."

Milon chose playing Tabla as his profession which was primarily his passion and he recalled a memorable event of his life when he played with Ustad Bahadur Hossain Khan. He said, "Ustad Bahadur Hossain Khan was in Chittagong in 1974 where he performed on stage. He didn't appreciate the playing of the Tabla artiste who accompanied him. There was a friend of mine who referred me to him. The next day I played for him while he was singing a tune for me. He was very pleased with my playing which I did for a few minutes. As everybody knows that there must be a preparation and rehearsal before playing for any Ustad. But I had none and still I confidently played with him. After the programme was over he embraced me and prayed for me to God. I can never forget this event of my life."

To the new generation of Tabla players Milon's advice is: they should work hard and practice for a good amount of time everyday. He said, "There is a tendency of the new generation to play for the songs before learning it properly. It is not a right practice. And another thing is the new players are eager to earn more than learn. This practice should be stopped. They should learn, listen and observe how the Ustads play and how they became great players. Only then they can be great players."
