The prime minister said Bangladesh could make tremendous progress if the three major resources -- soil, water and human resources -- could be utilised properly

Urging all not to depend any more on nature for trees and forests, she said "we have to plant trees, we have to create forests".

She urged everyone to start planting saplings and develop it into a habit in order to make Bangladesh full of trees in the next 10 years.

The meeting also urged different political, social organisations and the civil society to come forward and compel the government to withdraw the nomination.

The AL government had nominated Humayun Rashid Chowdhury, a career diplomat and former speaker of the Jativa Sangsad to run for the post, the meeting said. His nomination was however withdrawn following assurance from allies that they would support Bangladesh's candidate in the next polls.

The cabinet at two previous meetings on April 28 and May 12 seriously objected the home ministry's RAB proposals that wanted to give 'excessive" authority to the new force passing a new legislation.

The Duty Drawback and Exemption Department has been given the mandate to exempt 13 export-oriented industrial products from taxes. These are crust and finished leather, carpet, urea fertiliser, ceramic, melamine, printed calendar, cigarette, newsprint, furnace oil, stainless steel and cartularies.

The industries producing these 13 categories of products depend on imported raw materials. On import, the industries pay import duty and they can claim refund of expanded their share in the global market by adopting pragmatic polices and visionary leadership which rightly addressed their problems.

It is now speculated that a large chunk of the refund is based on false claims.

When pointed out that the LDCs were not benefiting from the rulebased multilateral trading system and that the share of the LDCs' trade in the world market has been declining over the last few decades, Rana said the LDCs had been wrongly demanding guota and special concessions.

"Good governance, necessary legislative changes and a good investment environment will attract investment and help small economies to grow large," Rana said.

He said protectionism and quota do not offer the real solution in the long run. "Market access and special concessions are only temporary measures which do not contribute in improving trade competitiveness of the LDCs.

"Rather than asking for market access, the LDCs should think of the future, understand the issues and challenges ahead and work out the ways and means which will help them tap their due share in the global trade," he said.

Rana said the poor nations should work out the comparative advantages of their products and promote South-South trade by lowering tariff structure. "Reduction of tariff will open up opportunities for the LDCs to strengthen their economies.

He said the poor economies should eye the regional markets, which can improve trade among the countries in the region. "ASEAN countries, for example, conduct most of the trade among themselves and their economies are growing. Bangladesh, being a member of SAARC, should also opt for such trade with other members of the regional grouping." When pointed out that many countries, unlike Bangladesh, still practise protectionism to protect heir own economies, Rana said: "Such problems should be solved by 'fighting it out' like what other develhad been torn down. Its headquarters in the capital was sealed on Saturday.

Diplomats in Yangon said the developments sounded the death knell for hopes of democratic reforms in Myanmar, which has suffered four decades of military rule.

"If they are rounding up the (leadership in Yangon) it's very difficult to work out what they're thinking and why they're doing it. The timing is quite extraordinary really," said one observer.

Aung San Suu Kyi had been on a month-long political tour of Myanmar's north, which became increasingly tense as her supporters repeatedly clashed with members of the junta-sponsored Union Solidarity Development Association (USDA)

The charismatic democracy leader had already complained of mounting harassment by the junta on her political visits across the country, during which thousands of process back on track adoring fans flocked to see her.

Annan said Saturday that Aung The opposition leader departed San Suu Kyi's detention highlighted on the trip to northern Myanmar on the need for national reconciliation May 6, the first anniversary of her and called on the two sides to start release from 19 months under substantive dialogue.

> confident the developments would not completely derail the reconciliation process but refused to comment on what action would be taken against the NLD. Mvanmar's state-run press was openly critical of Aung San Suu Kyi over the weekend, the first time such criticism has appeared since the secret talks began, while the government blamed the outbreak of violence directly on her. "These incidents happened UN Secretary General Kofi organisational trip to campaign publicly, thereby making many people resent her actions," Labour Minister Tinn Win told reporters Saturday.

Asked why the WTO was suffering from an image crisis, Rana said there is misconception about the organisation.

"The LDCs need to negotiate hard to press their demands. Today's meeting (Dhaka Meeting) is something in that line. This type of coordination is what is required," he said

Another factor, the deputy director general said, was that the rich countries, mostly European, had run the WTO. The secretariat of the WTO did not reflect representation of the members. " But presently we are heading towards solving that problem "

Rana said there was a lack of participation by the poor countries in the negotiation meetings. "The negotiations were not transparent. but everyone was endorsing them. A small group of countries were participating in the negotiating rounds."

within 24 hours. Otherwise, it would create a havoc in the garments sector, they said.

Terming the Bangladesh Flag (Protection) Ordinance, 1982 outdated, the garments sector leaders demanded its immediate suspension. There should be an initiative to scrap the Ordinance in the greater interest of the nation. "The leading buyers have already expressed grave concern at the situation." said BGMEA President Quazi Moniruzzaman.

He appealed to the government to raise the issue at the next cabinet meeting and find a permanent solution to the problem.

He said the garments owners expect development of local shipping, but not at the cost of the export-import business and a sector like the garments which employs more than 18 lakh workers.

Moniruzzaman said following the government's circular, the Main Line Operators (MLOs) have also stopped loading Bangladesh-bound goods, mainly raw materials from ports around the world.

The BGMEA president told journalists that foreign buyers have threatened to cancel business deals with them if the situation does not improve soon.

He further said the BGMEA is planning to file a case with the court to seek compensation for the damage caused by the delay in shipment of exportable goods.

The garments owners would have to make air shipment at their own cost if they fail to ship the items. Most of the items are exported on the basis of Free on Board (FoB) and the local exporters do not have to bear the transport costs, he said.

The results of this stalemate would be felt within a few months and around 100 garment factories would be affected, said Anisul Hug former vice-president and director of the BGMEA SM Nurul Haque, first vice-President of Bangladesh Frozen Food Exporters Association Quazi Monirul Had appealed to the prime minister to take immediate steps to resolve the deadlock.

Expressing grave concern at the situation, he said the crisis might reduce export earnings from the frozen foods sector.

Urging the authorities concerned to work out an acceptable formula to solve the problem immediately, the BFFEA president said the crisis affected loading of frozen food items as a huge quantity of exportable goods were waiting to be loaded into containers at Chittagong and Mongla ports.

Shippers Council of Bangladesh

Chairman of the Shippers Council of Bangladesh Faruber Anwar also expressed deep concern over the deadlock at the Chittagong Port.

The council has been receiving numerous letters and protests from the shippers and importers of the country regarding the stalemate at the port, he said in a statement last niaht.

"Like all other trade bodies, the Shippers Council also believes that the Bangladesh Flag Vessel (Protection) Ordinance goes against the free market policy of the government," he said.

Faruber Anwar demanded mmediate scrapping of the ordinance and observed that Bangladeshi flag vessels do not have sufficient capacity to carry all the exportable goods.

When she was released by the government, she was guaranteed freedom of movement around the dialogue between the warring sides and a transition to democracy for Myanmar was finally in the offing.

However, the mood soured in April when Aung San Suu Kyi complained publicly for the first time that talks with the junta, which began in October 2000 at the urging of the United Nations, had failed to make any progress.
