Ustad Amjad Ali Khan

The Sarod maestro: a new life breathed into an ancient form

'When Amjad Ali Khan performs, he carries a deep human spirit, a warm feeling, and, a sense of caring....'

TODAY, Amjad Ali Khan is one of the most distinguished and successful musicians in the world of Indian classical the 'Senia Bangash School' which traces its roots to the to great Mian Tansen. Amjad Ali Khan has undoubtedly added a new dimension to the repertoire of the Sarod.

the Crystal Award by the World Economic Forum, Honary Doctorate by the University of York, England. His two sons, Amaan Ali Bangash and Ayaan Ali Bangash, have already been introduced to the concert platform.

world to be his audience. And thus, it was that India saw the Sarod being given a new and yet timeless interpretation as Amjad Ali Khan dominated the classical field and the Indian consciousness.

But unlike many classical purists who perform with dedication in front of the masses and yet retain a certain questionable privilege in feeling their art to be above them. Amjad Ali Khan is one of the few maestros who considers his audience to be the soul of his motivation.

It is this very attitude that has endeared him and his music into an inseparable fusion of love and harmony with his listeners. Watching him on stage, you do not feel separate from Amjad Ali Khan; indeed he makes you feel he is playing for your pleasure and combined with the rapturous devotion he has for his instrument, it creates a togetherness between him and the audience that is truly memorable.

Straight from the heart...

Bauls at the Folk Music Festival

ELITA KARIM

HASSAN Raja's Baula ke Banaylo re... had me practically running to the hall to catch a place and also my heaving breath. I had to shove and push through all the dancing and clapping people to finally sit and take a look around me.

The four day Folk Music Festival, organized jointly by UNESCO and Shilpakala Academy saw yet another day on the 27th of June, dedicated to the bauls and their heart wrenching stories.

These strong and gallant voiced people, dressed in bright yellow, green, red and orange apparels with long hair sang with all their heart, giving out messages related to religion, the ways of the society, the thoughts of animals, birds and nature in general.

Creeping back stage, I found different generations of baul singers sitting and waiting for their turn on stage. Some of them were also seen fixing their colourful turbans and belts. Some of them were eager to talk about their music and also their lives.

Interestingly, their facial expressions, gestures and vibrant body language expressed their enthusiasm. They danced along with their self made compositions on stage, and made the audience do the same. The singers were accompanied by various kinds of instruments such as the harmonium, the flute, the traditional dotara, dholak, tabla, mandira and also the violin.

ing groups. His gestures, movements and various feats on stage had everyone clapping and asking for more. When asked as to why he didn't have a group of his own like all the others at the show, he replied that people kept tricking him and would never pay him for his performances.

A UNESCO official present at the show said that they arrange a show dedicated to folk music every year where they try to promote the folk art or the living art of Bangladesh, as defined, to everyone everywhere.
