Govt plans amendment to Children Act '74

BSS, Dhaka
The government is considering to make necessary amendments to the Children Act, 1974, to reduce the present age limit of the children to control the increasing juvenile crimes.
"The reality of a particular society must be taken into consideration and steps to be taken accordingly," Minister for Law, Justice and Parliamentary Affairs Moudud Ahmed told a workshop at the LGED Bhaban here.
The workshop on "Review of the Children Act, 1974" was organized by the ministry in collaboration with Save the Children-UK.
State Minister for Law, Justice and Parliamentary Affairs Shahjahan Omar, Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister Dr Kamal Uddin Siddiqui, Representative of Save the Children-UK David Humphrey, spoke at the first session of the workshop with Law Secretary M Asaduzzaman in the chair.
Prof Mizanur Rahman of Dhaka University law faculty presented the keynote paper.
Referring to the recent incident of murdering a school teacher by his student in the city, Moudud said it has become very tough to try the child offenders under children act, 1974 as children or juveniles are getting involved in various heinous crimes.
According to the Children Act, 1974, no person under the age of 16 years shall be sentenced to death.
Moudud told the workshop that the legal aid activities of the government would be strengthened from the next month, especially for the children and women.
Shahjahan Omar said the children were being used in different crimes, including smuggling and carrying arms and therefore, the users should be tried first.
The judges, law officers and the lawyers should have adequate training on juvenile trials, he said.
In his keynote paper Prof Mizanur Rahman proposed that the Children Act, 1974 should be implemented properly and discrepancies as regards age limit of criminal responsibility be removed.
"Corrections should be made to the correction centres first," he said while describing the situations in the juvenile correction centres.

Sharing and planning workshop on "Review of Children Act, 1974" Organised by: Ministry of Law, Justice and Parliamentary Affairs in collaboration with Save the Children-UK Venue: LGED Conference room, Dhaka Date: September 16, 2003
