Rich's weakness exposes developing nations to erratic growth: Unctad

AFP, Geneva

Industrialised powers are still struggling with the economic legacy of the 1990s, undermining a global recovery and hampering growth prospects for developing countries, the UN's annual report on trade and development said on Thursday.

The UN Conference on Trade and Development (Unctad) warned that developing nations should not count on a sustained global recovery to act as a driving force for their growth following a "slower and more erratic" upturn than expected in 2002.

The upturn underway in the United States was already beginning to look like the "double dip, jobless recovery" of the 1990s, diminishing the US's traditional role as an engine for the global economy, the 2003 Trade and Development Report said.

It cautioned that excess debt and depended largely on the evolution of domestic imbalances in the US. acknowledged that trade was which had not been tackled since the boom years, "could result in a expected to expand much faster in period of unstable and sluggish the developing world than in indusgrowth, with occasional surges as trialised countries.

But it cautioned: "The rapid Neither Europe, with its weak expansion of trade and further trade consumption and cap on counterliberalisation depend crucially on a rapid recovery of the world economy cyclical government spending, nor Japan with its stagnant investment rather than the other way around." and near zero growth, were in a

The report also dampened African countries' hopes of a boost under the poverty and hunger cutting drive promised at the United Nations' Millenium summit in 2000.

"Given the current level of development cooperation and the structural weaknesses across the region, there is now a growing consensus that it will be impossible to meet the Millenium Development Goals even under the most optimistic growth scenario for the world economy," the report said.

Average growth for all developinsulated from the downturn of ng countries including China rose to 3.3 per cent in 2002, up from 2.4 per It found that East Asia and Africa cent a vear earlier, but below the their trading environment, and average of 4.8 per cent in the 1990s. The differences in growth across the developing world are widening, and the ability of poor or emerging nations to deal with external shocks in volatile economic conditions varies sharply, according to Unctad. Asian countries were rated as in the best position, picking up strongly this year thanks to "an independent momentum for growth" generated by a more expansive monetary policy which helped boost demand and beat off the global slowdown.

Latin America was likely to avoid a recession thanks to a brighter political outlook, but its recovery will be "anaemic and fragile", with little room for changes in monetary policy following debt crises, Unctad warned Africa was blighted by low commodity prices and unable to rise above performance of past two vears, while only a handful of African countries might experience growth rates of seven per cent or more, the report said.

REUTERS, Singapore

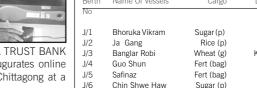

Asian ex-Pacific foreign exchange reserves have risen to $1.677 trillion, according to the latest available figures from regional central banks.

The build-up of Asian forex reserves, mostly in US dollars, reflects steady intervention by the region's monetary authorities to stall currency appreciation due to strong portfolio nflows and rising export receipts.

The policy has come under increasing criticism by US and European policymakers, who say it makes their exports less competitive and leads to job losses.
