China warns against proposed US bill to repeal trading status

AFP, REUTERS, Beijing

China said Tuesday a proposed bill by two US senators that aims to repeal the Asian nation's normal trade relation status would only harm growing bilateral economic ties. "The proposed bill by the American senators is harmful for the development of our relationship, it damages our countries' trading and economic partnertiship," the Ministry of Foreign s Affairs said in a written statement. "We are completely opposed to the bill." The US Congress granted China the permanent normal trade relations status in 2000, paving the way for it to enter the World Trade Organisation and for US busithe nesses to deal more directly with for Beijing. Byron Dorgan and Lindsey Graham, who proposed the legislation late last week, said the status should be rescinded in retaliation atefor China's unfair trade practices.

They said China's trade tactics, including keeping the yuan artificially weak, were responsible for the huge US trade deficit with China, which is expected to surpass 200 billion dollars in 2005.

 The lawmakers have not said when they plan to debate or push for a vote on the bill but the move comes as US President George W.
 Bush prepares to welcome his Chinese counterpart, Hu Jintao, for us an official visit in April. on Earlier China responded to US demands for a stronger yuan to reduce its trade surplus by saying market forces were already driving the currency and warning Washington not to make political capital out of the issue.

Tensions over trade have become a regular irritant in Sino-American relations and risk overshadowing a visit to Washington in April by President Hu Jintao.

Cheng Siwei, an influential lawmaker and economist, said China and the United States should ease these frictions through consultations as equal partners.
