SANDEE
THE SOUTH ASIAN NETWORK FOR DEVELOPMENT AND ENVIRONMENTAL ECONOMICS
Summer 2007 Research Competition
Deadline: October 15, 2006
The South Asian Network for Development and Environmental Economics (SANDEE) invites research pre-proposals on the inter-linkages between poverty reduction efforts and outcomes and environmental change. Poverty is closely tied to poor health, low productivity, and illiteracy, and also to unsustainable use of natural resources, lack of access to clean water and sanitation, and exposure to dirty air and chemicals. We invite researchers to think through how environmental changes can influence poverty and poverty reduction efforts within the context of the millennium development goals. Pre-proposals, if accepted, will lead to an invitation to submit a full research proposal. Three thematic areas have been identified for the current round of research grants as detailed below. Some common research questions posed under each theme are presented here, however, the researcher is welcome to go beyond these questions.
1. Economics of Natural Resource Use
Large groups of people depend on land, forests, rivers and other natural resources. SANDEE seeks to support research that addresses economic issues related to resource management. What are the implications of full-cost pricing of natural resources? What market failures can be successfully addressed through regulatory policies and what require better implementation and institutional change? How do institutional arrangements and co-investment strategies affect resource use? What incentives and national/ international policies will lead to better management of regional and global resources? What are the local impacts of these policies?
2. Economics of Pollution Management
Dirty water, waste, toxic chemicals, and indoor and outdoor air pollution have serious implications for human health and productivity. How do we assess the costs of pollution, especially for the poor? What policy instruments (taxes, subsidies, user-fees etc.) and services will result in cleaner air and water? What are the distributional outcomes associated with environmental policy instruments? How do we account for environmental costs in designing economic policies (including trade, macro etc.)?
3. Economics of Coastal / Riverine Zone Management
Coastal / riverine communities are vulnerable to sudden on-set of disasters, long-term impacts of climate change, as well as on-going erosion of coastal resources. Can economic instruments (fees, permits, subsidies) be used to better manage coastal development? What incentives and dis-incentives lead to inefficient use of coastal / riverine resources, particularly fisheries? Further, what is the role of insurance markets in responding to coastal / riverine disasters? What is the role of natural and man-made barriers in mitigating disasters? How can we value the services provided by natural barriers? How and what kind of institutional change will improve well-being or reduce disaster risks?
SANDEE supports economics research related to environmental problems. Pre-proposals that do not have a strong economics component will not be considered. Pre-proposals are sought from junior to mid-career faculty and researchers; and multi-disciplinary / country projects and use of secondary data are encouraged. Institutional affiliation is required for receiving support. SANDEE's grants range from $10,000 to $15,000 for a duration of 12-24 months. Pre-proposals will be evaluated on their academic merit and policy significance. Selected researchers will be invited to submit a full research proposal, which will go through a rigorous review process.
Please visit www.sandeeonline.org for online submission of your pre-proposal and CV. The deadline for receiving pre-proposal is October 15, 2006 (pre-proposals received after this date will not be accepted). Please review Pre-Proposal Research Guidelines in www.sandeeonline.org for responses to frequently asked questions (FAQ) and for examples of previously funded proposals. For further query contact us at info@sandeeonline.org
