AFP, Singapore

Crude prices were lower in Asian trade Monday on mild US weather, ample supplies of heating oil products and confusion over planned production cuts by Opec, dealers said

At 2:29 pm (0629 GMT) New York's main contract, light sweet crude for January delivery, shed 60 cents to 58.37 dollars a barrel. The December contract expired in New York Friday at 55.81 dollars per barrel.

Brent North Sea crude for January delivery lost 68 cents to 58.31 dollars Global crude prices plunged to their lowest level in 17 months last week before recovering slightly, dealers said.

"The market finished low last week and it is continuing this morning," said Victor Shum, the senior principal with Purvin and Gertz energy consultancy in Singapore.

"It's really a combination of factors that has caused the market to come down; the Opec cuts and their credibility and the winter weather in the northern hemisphere," said Shum.

The 11-member Opec decided on October 20 to slash its production by 1.2 million barrels per day (bpd) from the start of November due to what it said was an over-supplied market to support prices which have fallen from record highs of above 78 dollars earlier this year

According to an analysis by "Petrologistics", Opec's exports have fallen 1.1 million bpd in November.

China plans to up car, auto parts exports by ten folds AFP, Beijing

China plans to boost its car and auto parts exports by more than 10 fold to 120 billion dollars in a decade, a vice commerce minister said Monday. The exports of car and auto parts... represent the level of a country's industrial technology and competitiveness," Wei Jianguo was quoted by Xinhua news agency as saying. "Our country's car and auto parts exports currently amount to just 0.7 percent of the global trading volume so our plan is to make up 10 percent of the world auto trade in 10 years' time, which is 120 billion dollars." China's exports of vehicles and auto parts have grown rapidly during the past few years, Wei said In 2005, exports reached 10.9 billion dollars, up 34 percent from the previous year, he said. Chinese auto maker Chery told AFP on Saturday that it would export 50,000 vehicles by the end of 2006, compared with 18,000 last year, mostly to its current markets in the Middle East, Southeast Asia, Latin America and Africa.

CORUS TAKEOVER

Group is bracing for a major battle to take over British steel firm Corus in the wake of a dramatic counter bid

CSN, industry watchers here said. For now, the Tatas have decided to adopt a wait-and-watch posture as CSN begins due diligence on Corus soon.

The Tatas are reportedly busy taking legal opinion on CSN's counter bid with a higher price offer per share of Corus than the Indian conglomerate had offered, taking the latter by surprise last Friday.

The Brazilian company, one of the top five steel makers in the world, is expected to make a formal offer at an extraordinary general meeting of board of directors of Corus, the Anglo-Dutch company, in London on December 4. Even though the Corus had last month recommended to its shareholders the bid by the Tatas, sources in the Indian company said the British firm is going ahead with opening its account books to CSN, just as it had done for Tata Steel.

While ideally, the Tatas would be hoping the Corus board to turn down the offer by the Brazilian company, officials of the Indian conglomerate are keeping their fingers crossed because CSN has offered 475 pence per share of the British firm as against 455 pence bid by the Tatas.

STAR BUSINESS REPORT by rival Brazilian steel company

Investment on a large scale is badly needed for the promising youths of Bangladesh in order to accelerate growth and reduce poverty, observed speakers at a function in Dhaka vesterday.

Investing heavily on young population between the ages of 12 and 24 years will be one of the profound decisions Bangladesh can ever make to banish poverty and galvanize its economy, they said at the dissemination of the World Bank Report 2007 on 'development and the next generation'.

The event was organised jointly by World Bank and Brac at the Brac Centre Inn in the city

The World Bank development report (WDR) offers a framework addressing five transitions of youths, namely, in schools, in work, in health risks, in forming families and in exercising citizenship.

UAE aims to cut back on foreign workers

AFP, Dubai

The United Arab Emirates (UAE) president has announced plans to gradually replace Asian workers with nationals to redress the huge

Nayhan told London-based newspaper Asharq Al-Awsat he was aware of "the seriousness of the imbalance" in the Gulf state where foreigners make up about 80 percent of the four-million population. The solution was a "progressive" nationalisation of the workforce with local, qualified workers taking over from non-Emiratis, he said on Monday. The president called for the economy to be restructured in a way that would cut down on "the mass of unqualified foreign workers who account for the biggest factor in the demographic imbalance".

Foreign labourers, mostly from the Indian sub-continent, have been powering the UAE's construction boom but their working conditions have been a regular target of criticism by rights groups.

Sheikh Khalifa, however, said they "can not be classified as immigrant workers as they work here on a provisional basis under fixed term contracts.

"As a result, the standing laws on immigration in Western countries can not apply fully to these workers," who often complain of not being paid salaries or over poor housing at labour camps in the desert. he said.

The president denied his country was coming under US pressure on the labour and political fronts in negotiations to seal a lucrative free trade agreement with Washington.

"Our negotiators have clear instructions: no laxity or negligence, under any circumstances, when it concerns the sovereignty of our country or the independence of our will," said Sheikh Khalifa.

In March, about 2,500 labourers rioted at the construction site of Burj Dubai, set to be the world's tallest skyscraper. Some destroyed vehicles and equipment.

The riot prompted the New Yorkbased Human Rights Watch (HRW) to call on the Abu Dhabi government to "end abusive labour practices" and describe labour conditions as "less than human".

Earlier this month, the UAE prime minister. Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid al-Maktoum, who is also ruler of Dubai, ordered sweeping measures to protect foreign labourers

He said a provisional plan for natural gas development will be ready by the end of November or early December

"According to the plan, our target is to increase production to 600 million cubic feet (17 million cubic meters) daily by 2011 and to one billion cubic feet (28.4 million cubic meters) by 2014-2015," Zanki said. Kuwait in March announced the discovery for the first time of 35 trillion cubic feet (one trillion cubic meters) of free natural gas and a large quantity of light oil in its northern oilfields.

ANN/ THE JAKARTA POST

To attract investors to put their money in the country's vast energy resources, Indonesia's Finance Ministry has lifted import duties on goods and equipment for oil and gas exploration and production as well as export tax on coal products.

The import duty exemption for equipment and goods used in the oil and gas upstream sector is given to oil and gas companies that operate under production sharing contracts with BP Migas, the regulatory body for oil and gas exploration and production, the Finance Ministry announced last week.

The equipment and products exempted from import duties include those used for drilling and production, transportation, power generation as well as workshop equipment and electrical tools.
