Prostate Cancer in its early stage is usually not accompanied by any noticeable symptoms.

As the cancer grows, however, it begins to put more pressure on the urethra, which then begins to cause a variety of symptoms e.g. more frequent urination (especially at night); pain or burning sensation while urinating; urinary retention (an inability to fully empty the bladder); difficulty in starting, maintaining, or stopping the urine stream; straining to urinate, etc. If left untreated, patients will have greater difficulty and more frequent urination, to the point that they may urinate blood
