Tea estate feasting on reserve forest

Keeps defying status quo from Ctg court; forest department watches helplessly

MOSTAFA YOUSUF, Ctg

A tea estate in Chattogram has continuously been encroaching on one of the oldest and richest reserve forests in the country. Over the years, it has foiled forestation attempts and continuously damaged trees while expanding its territory.

Defying a court order, Halda Tea Valley has been ravaging the Ramgor-Sitakunda forest in Fatikchhari since the district administration leased 1,052-acre land to the estate in 2003 mentioning it as khas land.

The forest department officials say 134 acres of the leased-out land was within the reserve forest, and they sought amendment to the land record that shows it as khas land.

A Chattogram court in June 2017 imposed a status quo on the 845-acre area, which include 134 acres of the forest, following a case filed by the department, they added.

But the tea estate continued cutting trees and expanding its territory while the forest department is unable to take any action until the matter is resolved, in compliance with the court order.

The 845-acre comprises the three plots recorded as forestland in RS (Revisional Survey) in 1927-28.

Before this, these plots were recorded as reserve forest in a Calcutta gazette issued in 1893 by the then Assam-SEE PAGE 10 COL 2

Walton smartphones going to US

Walton is set to become the first Bangladeshi company to export locally-made smartphones to the US market, in yet another emblem of the country's might in high-tech manufacturing. The company will send the first consignment of smartphones with the 'Made in Bangladesh' label from its Gazipur plant on March 1, said SM Monjurul Alam, its managing director.

"The smartphones are bound for a renowned American brand and Walton is the 'original equipment manufacturer,'" he said, but didn't disclose the name of the US brand. "Walton always remains at the fore and keeps surprising us by hitting new milestones," Telecom Minister Mustafa Jabbar said.

Hasina warns AL men

RASHIDUL HASAN and MOHIUDDIN ALAMGIR

Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina last night asked her party leaders and activists not to go overboard with the observance of "Mujib Borsho", the birth centenary of Father of the Nation Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman.

Speaking at a meeting of the Awami League Parliamentary Party at the Jatiya Sangsad Bhaban, she also asked them to stay away from installing any mural of Bangabandhu without the approval of the Bangabandhu Memorial Trust.

"I know what we had to go through after the killing of Bangabandhu. I also know about who played what role and who did what after his killing. So don't set up any mural of Bangabandhu without the permission of the Bangabandhu Memorial Trust." SEE PAGE 10 COL 2

When Lundy met Herman

CNN ONLINE

Meet Herman and Lundy, recent cuddle buddies and rescue animals.

The two are an unlikely pair: Herman, a pigeon, suffered neurological damage more than a year ago. He can't fly. Little Lundy, a newborn chihuahua puppy, can't use his back legs.

But stick them together, and the two will snuggle up as though they were members of the same litter -- or nest.

The two met through the Mia Foundation, a rescue organization in Rochester, New York, that rehabilitates animals with birth defects and physical deformities. Sue Rogers, the nonprofit's founder, sends most of her rescues to foster homes around the US but keeps a few of them for school programs about bullying.

Their interspecies friendship has inspired scores of supporters to donate to the foundation. And the animals, Rogers said, make each other better. SEE PAGE 10 COL 2

Lamia to get her new school building

STAR REPORT

Her wish has been granted and she is going to have a new school building.

The authorities decided to construct the building after Lamia Akter, a fifth grader at Dakkhin Gazipur Government Primary School in Pirojpur Sadar upazila, wrote to Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina in June last year.

In the letter, Lamia said her school building was in a sorry state and it turned risky. She asked why some 128 children, including her, would have to attend classes in such a risky manner.

She also said the students had to clean their classrooms every day as dust fell from damaged walls and ceilings.

The Daily Star obtained a copy of the letter and ran a report on it with the headline: "Pirojpur schoolgirl writes to PM for new school building".

HUMANITARIAN CRISIS IN SYRIA Air strikes hit hospitals, camps

Nearly a million fled Russia-backed regime offensive

REUTERS, Beirut/Geneva

Government air strikes have hit hospitals and displaced persons camps in northwest Syria and killed about 300 civilians as President Bashar al-Assad's forces press an assault against the last rebel stronghold, the United Nations said yesterday.

UN officials said relief agencies were overwhelmed by the humanitarian crisis as nearly one million civilians, most of them women and children, had fled towards the Turkish border in bitter winter conditions to escape the onslaught.

"Civilians fleeing the fighting are being squeezed into areas without safe shelter that are shrinking in size by the hour. And still they are bombed. They simply have nowhere to go," UN human rights chief Michelle Bachelet said in a statement.

Syrian and Russian warplanes meanwhile kept up raids on the town of Darat Izza in Aleppo province yesterday, witnesses said, one day after two hospitals there were badly damaged.

At Al Kinana Hospital, blown-out walls and dust-covered medical cables and supplies were strewn about the hospital after two staff were wounded on Monday, witnesses said.

Appearing on national television on Monday, Assad said the rapid military gains presaged the eventual defeat of the nine-year-old insurgency against him although it could still take time. The rebel factions include Turkish-backed rebels and jihadist militants. SEE PAGE 10 COL 2
