Not enough books

Moni Haider, an official of Bangla Academy, told The Daily Star that printing of the new edition of a book titled “Bhasha Andoloner Itihash, Koyekti Dalil” is going in full swing. “This book by Dr Ratanlal is also an important read,” he said.
The stall attendant said a book titled “Prothom Shaheed Minar o Piaru Sharder”, edited by Anisuzzaman is very popular among book lovers.
Asked if there’s a crisis of books on Language Movement, eminent writer Imdadul Haque Milon told

The Daily Star that Bangla Academy has published most of the books that were written on this topic. “Other publishers should bring more books on Language Movement. This would benefit younger readers,” he said.
Asked why books on the Language Movement are not being released, Milon said a lot of research is needed to write a book on this, which might be deterring writers.
Meanwhile a few school students were seen disheartened after not being able to find an appropriate read on the Language Movement. The parent of a child mentioned that she was looking for a book that’s suitable for children, but couldn’t find anything.

Farid Ahmed, president of Bangladesh Knowledge and Creative Publishers’ Association and publisher of Shomoy Prokashon, said many publishers cannot bring out adequate number of books due to lack of enriched manuscripts.
Tariqul Islam Roni of Tamralipi publication said his house has published a book on Language Movement especially for children. “But more books like this are needed.”

said access and affordability to healthy food is difficult for most Bangladeshis.
Iftekhar Rashid, health specialist at the World Bank, said the government programme regarding nutrition in the past two-and-a-half decades was predominantly in rural areas.
Fernholz Manfried, team leader of the European Union Delegation to Bangladesh, hoped Bangladesh will renew its food and nutrition security commitments, which will be reflected highly in the eighth five-year plan.
He said effective role of the national parliament is required to overcome the challenges of malnutrition.
Dutch Ambassador to Bangladesh

Harry Verweij said private sector partners should be included in addressing nutrition challenges.
World Food Programme Representative and Country Director in Bangladesh Richard Ragan said private sector stakeholders will also have to come forward.
Robert Simpson, country representative of Food and Agriculture Organization, stressed for undertaking more micro level nutrition policies.
Mujiul Haque Chunnun, chairman of the parliamentary standing committee on Labour and Employment Ministry, said the government is working to ensure nutrition for the poor and malnourished, especially children.

The government has taken steps to increase availability of protein-rich food, said Planning Commission member Zakir Hossain Akanda.
Bangladesh National Nutrition Council Director General Shah Nawaz said more than 20 ministries are involved in the nutrition programme. Some of the ministries have spent significantly high on nutrition, and it is required to see whether their expenditure was for the right people, he said.
Prothom Alo Associate Editor Abdul Quayum said malnutrition is a major cause of stunting and it is a big problem in Bangladesh.
