Though this newspaper did not see any poster of Sumon, banners seeking vote for him were seen in Anderkilla and Shiringora areas.

Asked, Sumon said, "Some of my supporters did that, but I have instructed them to pull those down immediately."

The port city's residents welcomed this poster-free campaign.

Najim Muhammad, a resident of the ward, said, "This is a good initiative and will help keep our area clean."

Hamid Ullah, another inhabitant, added, "The beauty of port city is gradually fading due to such poster nuisance. His [Sumon] initiative will bring a fresh change and also inspire others."

According to the EC office, now, a total number of six mayor candidates, 56 candidates in reserve seats for women and 161 councillor candidates in general wards will contest the polls.

'HEALTHY WARD' Meanwhile, residents prided that Jamal Khan has become an example for others to follow. They said initiatives taken by the incumbent councillor has helped the ward become green and clean.

The initiatives include removing open dumpsters and setting up of roadside waste bins for dumping solid waste, beautification of road islands and medians and tree plantation.

This 0.78 square kilometre ward also has a fountain at Jamal Khan intersection, which is the centre point, to welcome passers-by. The fountain also has decorative lights, which are switched on every evening.

Besides, roadside seating arrangements for around 100 people have been made on one side of the intersection. There's also a terracotta design depicting the country's history on the boundary wall of Dr Khastagir Government Girls' High School.

"It has become a question of our honour, which is why we have suspended the classes and examinations," she stated.

Dr Md Shajedul Karim, dean of the School of Applied Sciences and Technology, said, "I was in communication with the students from the very start, even today [yesterday]. I assured them of a proper solution and am waiting for them to show wisdom and withdraw the hunger strike."

Right before establishing this park, Armenians living in Old Dhaka founded a club, known as "Anta Char" when they used to play indoor games. The club was later demolished by the British. According to many, there was an open place beside the club known as "Anta Gharer Maidan".

In 1857, during the Sepoy Mutiny against colonial rulers, English soldiers executed many mutineers by hanging them from different trees of the place.

A monument in memory of the sepoys was later erected at the park.

Women politicians

FROM PAGE 3 the gender diversity requirements, and creating a roadmap to ensure 33 percent representation in committees by the end of this year.

Golam Kibria Rubel, assistant secretary of BNP's south committee, attempted to mansplain the lack of political participation of women, saying, "Women do not want to stay in politics unless they are given posts like president of secretary. They have to make their own space."

Mohammad Salim Mahmud, information and research secretary of AL central executive committee, sidestepped the demands, and narrated a well-researched list of steps taken by the party to eradicate violence against women, child marriage, sex trafficking and the passing of laws related to women and local government.

"This is a very big party and not everybody can be given space yet. They will be given space in the future," he said.

BNP standing committee member Amir Khasru Mahmud Chowdhury expressed his lack of support for the "positive discrimination" that reserved seats aim to provide.

"I do not support having reserved seats in the parliament. Women should be elected. I am also not a believer of percentages. Let there be 60 percent women if they have the capacity," he said. He also added that 33 percent should not be a ceiling; rather, it should be a minimum that women should aim for.

"We have not been able to meet the expectation, but will hopefully fulfil it in the next council," he said.

BNP's advisory body of 73 members includes eight women, a paltry 11 percent.

Ziauddin Ahmed Bablu, co-chair of the central committee of Jatiya Party, said the government has taken steps to hang those who throw acid.

"We try to prioritise women when giving nominations," commented parliamentarian Faruk Khan, a member of AL's presidium committee.

"It is only 33 percent, not 50 percent. We should be able to achieve this. Evidence shows that women's political participation can be improved by focusing on their apprenticeship and the local needs," said Judith Herberston, head of DFID Bangladesh.

"Party leaders, it is about time to get to know the women leaders," said Lesley Richards, deputy chief of party at The International Foundation for Electoral Systems.

Randall Olson, DRG director at USAID, also spoke at the conference.

Following a news report published on Bangla daily Prothom Alo, the HC bench on October 31 last year issued the rule asking authorities to explain why the conviction of children by mobile courts should not be declared illegal.

According to the newspaper report, mobile courts illegally jailed 121 children for six months to one year and sent them to juvenile correction centres in Tongi and Jashore.

Barrister Md Abdul Halim and Advocate Ishrat Hasan placed the newspaper report before the HC bench for necessary orders. The same day, the HC bench ordered the government to immediately release children -- aged under 12 years -- who were convicted by mobile courts at various times and kept in juvenile correction centres across the country.

The court said children [under 12 years] have no understanding of consequences of offences, and therefore cannot be convicted by mobile courts and kept in correction centres.

It also granted six months' bail to children -- aged between 12 and 18 -- who were convicted by mobile courts and kept in the correction centres.

They will be released subject to the satisfaction of the children's court concerned, after furnishing bail bond, the HC said.

Attorney General Mahbubey Alam and Deputy Attorney General Bipul Bagmar represented the state.
