RELIEF IN RAJSHAHI

Still many left out

Aid given to more people than primary estimate; four indigenous villages yet to get it

ANWAR ALI, Rajshahi

Though the relief distribution in Rajshahi so far has been provided to nearly triple the initial estimate of the poor, many belonging to indigenous communities in the district have remained out of the purview of government support.

Indigenous people, who largely work as day labourers on agricultural land or in the towns, are among those targeted by the government's relief efforts as the coronavirus situation rendered these day labourers jobless.

Many of them coped through the first few weeks of the shutdown using their savings and selling off livestock.

The Daily Star identified at least four Orao community villages in Matikata union of Godagari upazila, where the dwellers claim none have received any relief so far.

Of these families, 65 live in Habaspur village, 18 in Bhajanpur, 25 in Notunpara, and 28 in Silinda.

"None of us got relief. The leaders say wait but how long will I wait?" said Jagadish Chandra Bose of Habaspur.

"I don't get a job often when hunger forces me to go out. When I do get a job, the police chase me back home."

Ruhul Amin, chairman of Matikata Union Parishad, said these villages might have escaped the administration's notice due to their remote location. He said no one had brought the matter to his notice till now.

"Now, you've informed me. I will see for myself that

Countries must return to health surveillance

Says WHO, readies coronavirus app for checking symptoms

REUTERS, Zurich

Countries must return to "basic principles" of public health surveillance if they are to bring the coronavirus outbreak under control, the World Health Organization's (WHO) top emergency health expert said on Friday.

The WHO, which said it is facing a $1.3 billion funding deficit for its effort to tackle Covid-19, issued the call for more surveillance as many countries including the United States, Switzerland, Mexico and Germany have turned their efforts toward re-opening economies battered by the pandemic.

Mike Ryan, head of the WHO's health emergencies programme, said during a media briefing from Geneva that all nations should focus on the fundamentals of the global coronavirus fight: scouting potential new infections, hunting them down, confirming them and then separating those afflicted, to save others from the disease.

"We seem...to be avoiding the uncomfortable reality that we need to get back to public health surveillance," Mike Ryan, the head of the WHO's health emergencies programme, said during a

LOOMING SESSION JAM

DU considering holiday cuts

ASHIK ABDULLAH APU

Dhaka University authorities are considering cutting holidays to prevent a looming session jam and make up for academic losses caused by the ongoing indefinite closure of the institution over the coronavirus outbreak.

They are also mulling over arranging additional classes after the resumption of academic activities to compensate for the academic losses.

Keeping these points under consideration, DU Vice-Chancellor Prof Md Akhtaruzzaman will hold a meeting tomorrow with the deans to discuss the issues, said deans of two faculties.

A week after the country reported its first Covid-19 case on March 8, the DU authorities suspended all academic activities till March 28. The suspension, which was later extended for an indefinite period, resulted in cancellation of mid-term examinations of many departments.

Although some private universities are now offering online classes to students, the DU and most other public universities are yet to introduce such classes due to various problems, including lack of access to internet and electronic gazettes. Some DU faculties, however, are conducting surveys on online classes.

BANGABANDHU'S PABNA SPEECH
On the third day of the four-day tour of North Bengal, Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman today visits Pabna.

He was warmly greeted by the locals. Speaking at a mammoth gathering at Pabna Stadium Bangabandhu rules out the possibility of any talks with Pakistani President ZA Bhutto before the latter recognises Bangladesh as a sovereign, independent state. He further says that Pakistan has lost prestige before the world community. As Pakistan's political master, the USA, has recognised the reality of Bangladesh, the country will follow suit whether there is any discussion or not, reiterates the prime minister. He calls upon

Another policeman dies from Covid-19

Law enforcers form teams to check on fellow infected cops

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Another policeman died of Covid-19 while undergoing treatment at Central Police Hospital in the capital yesterday.

Jalaluddin Khoka, 47, a constable at Dhaka Metropolitan Police (DMP), breathed his last around 7:10pm, according to a statement of the Police Headquarters.

With him, the death toll among cops rose to seven and all of them were from DMP, the statement said.

Meanwhile, different police units are forming "special teams" to visit the Covid-19 infected force members and inquire about their health, maintaining social distancing.

"The teams will visit Covid-19 infected police

Turkish doctors turn detectives to track virus

AFP, Istanbul

In full protective gear, two doctors climb the stairs four at a time. Their first task of the day: to test a woman who has had contact with a coronavirus patient in Istanbul.

Visibly perturbed by the appearance of men in white bodysuits on her landing, the resident in the populous Fatih district answers their questions before she is tested.

She will get her results the next day.

In Turkey, nearly 6,000 teams of "tracers" -- all health professionals -- track potential Covid-19 cases 24 hours a day by identifying and following up with people who have had contact with patients.

By helping find new cases who are then quickly

Rock 'n' roll pioneer Little Richard dies

AFP, New York

Little Richard, whose outrageous showmanship and lightning-fast rhythms intoxicated crowds with hits like "Tutti Frutti" and "Long Tall Sally," has died. He was 87 years old.

Reverend Bill Minson, a close friend of the legendary musician, told AFP Little Richard had died Saturday morning. He confirmed the cause of death was cancer.

With a distinctive voice that ranged from robust belting to howling falsetto, Richard transfixed audiences and became an inspiration for artists including The Beatles as he transformed the blues into the feverish new style of

Virus inflicts huge US job losses

Europe moves to keep its border shut for another month

AFP, Washington

The United States recorded its steepest job losses in history over the coronavirus pandemic as Europe moved to keep its borders shut for another month.

Hopes have been rising that the worst of the global catastrophe, which has killed more than 270,000 people, has passed, and the United States on Friday approved a new at-home saliva test to speed up diagnosis for Covid-19.

But after weeks of lockdown across the world, the effects have been painfully visible, with the global economy suffering its most acute downturn in nearly a century.

In the United States, 20.5 million jobs were wiped out in April -- the most ever reported -- with unemployment rising to 14.7 percent, the highest since the Great Depression.

The world's largest economy has suffered the deadliest coronavirus outbreak, with more than 77,000 fatalities and nearly 1.3 million cases.

Mindful of elections in November, President Donald Trump has nonetheless vowed to reopen the country, and a growing number of state governors have already let business resume with precautions.

Trump played down the unemployment numbers, pointing to substantial gains Friday on global stock markets as proof that better times were ahead.

"We're going to have a phenomenal year next year," Trump told reporters. "I think it's going to come back blazing."
