The Cabinet today meets today for about three hours. The cabinet meeting is presided over by Bangabandhu. The cabinet discusses various pressing issues including food and relief distribution, price hike of essential commodities and the law and order situation.

WORKERS WILL BE INVOLVED IN FACTORY MANGAMENT

The government is committed to ensuring workers' participation in operation, production and management of industrial units, says a government source. A detailed plan in this regard will be announced soon. The main aim of this initiative is to encourage workers through creating a sense of ownership among them to increase overall industrial productivity. It will also significantly Purbodesh.

NEW AGRICULTURAL LOAN APPROVED

Bangladesh Bank has approved an additional Tk 2 crore as loan for the Bangladesh Agricultural Development Bank. This fund will be distributed among farmers to increase productivity in the agricultural sector. Earlier, Bangladesh Bank allocated Tk 8.40 crore for the National Cooperative Bank to invest in rice, sugar and fish cultivation. SOURCES: June 4, 1972 issue of ordinary and economic life in nearly every country on the planet.

After suffering some of the highest human losses, Europe and the United States are now emerging from months of confinement in a bid to soften the blow of a looming recession.

In the French capital, Parisians reclaimed the beloved morning rituals at cafe terraces that were allowed to sprawl across pavement to accommodate social distancing measures.

"It's really nice, we got up just for this, so we appreciate it, we're really happy," said Charlotte, who made a morning stop at a cafe near the Canal Saint-Martin.

"It's a bit of a feeling of regained freedom, that's what it is," added another patron, 61-year-old Philippe.

Elsewhere in France, bars and restaurants were allowed to go a step further and allow customers to sit inside, while beaches and weddings worship and water sports. were also back in business.

The excitement was visible in

On the other side of the Atlantic, Latin American countries are still facing an upward curve of infections, with cases surging particularly high in Brazil, which has logged the fourth highest number of deaths worldwide.

The region has detected at least one million cases and recorded over 50,000 deaths, more than half of which are in Brazil, according to an AFP tally.

The World Health Organization has warned the region's healthcare systems could be overwhelmed by the influx of patients, with Peru, Chile and Mexico also seeing high daily increases in infections.

Yet Rio de Janeiro started gradually easing lockdown measures, the Brazilian city's mayor said, beginning with the reopening of places of

Yet the country, which has suffered the world's fifth highest toll with nearly 29,000 deaths from the virus, still faces tough times ahead with the economy expected to shrink by 11 percent this year due to the pandemic.

A similar story is playing out elsewhere on the continent where schools, swimming pools, pubs and tourist sites are steadily reopening to ease the economic pain of their lockdowns, despite fears of a second wave of infections

In the UK, British MPs were set to return to parliament in person after ending a virtual system, with plans to debate quarantine requirements for those entering the hard-hit country.

And in the sporting world, Formula One organisers announced an eight-

Meanwhile, the United States still leads the world with more than 105,000 deaths from Covid-19, though its daily tolls are no longer on a steep incline.

The crisis there has recently been overshadowed by anti-racism protests that have erupted across the country in response to police killings of black Americans.

While many US states had started relaxing virus measures, several major cities have imposed curfews in the face of the protests, which have turned violent in some zones. GATHERINGS HIT from the WHO's Geneva headquarters. The WHO said only a small proportion of Covid-19 patients needed antibiotics to treat subsequent bacterial infections.

Much of East Asia, meanwhile, has seen infections slow to a trickle in recent weeks, but restrictions on mass gatherings remain.

The organisation has issued guidance to medics not to provide antibiotic therapy or prophylaxis to patients with mild Covid-19, or to patients with moderate illness without a clinical suspicion of bacterial infection.

Tedros said the guidelines should help tackle antimicrobial resistance while saving lives.

He called the threat of antimicrobial resistance "one of the most urgent challenges of our time".

"It's clear that the world is losing its ability to use critically important antimicrobial medicines," he said.

Highlighting inappropriate usage, he said there was an "overuse" of antibiotics in some countries, while in low-income states, such life-saving medicines were unavailable, "leading to needless suffering and death".

DISEASE TREATMENT DISRUPTED Meanwhile the WHO said the Floyd, and as sports events begin a prevention and treatment of noncommunicable diseases (NCDs) had been severely disrupted since the Covid-19 pandemic began in December, following a survey of 155 countries.

"This situation is of significant concern because people living with NCDs are at higher risk of severe Covid-19-related illness and death," it said.

The survey, during a three-week period in May, found that low-income countries were most affected.

Some 53 percent of countries reported partially or completely disrupted services for hypertension treatment.

The figure was 49 percent for diabetes treatment and related complications; 42 percent for cancer treatment, and 31 percent for cardiovascular emergencies.

The most common reasons for discontinuing or reducing services were cancellations of planned treatments, a decrease in available public transport and a lack of staff because health workers had been reassigned to Covid-19 treatment. MASS GATHERINGS RISK

The WHO warned about the dangers of mass gatherings, as protests rage in the United States and elsewhere over the killing of unarmed black man George tentative resumption.

"Mass gatherings have the potential to act as super-spreading events," warned Tedros, highlighting WHO guidance designed to help organisers determine how such events can be held safely.

Meanwhile, the Energy Division of the power ministry has decided not to impose any surcharge on the delayed residential electricity bill for February to April and gas bill for February-May due to the pandemic.

Subscribers have been asked to provide the bill by June 30 to avail the benefit.

The Montreal visitor, thought to be two or three years old, was likely led astray while chasing prey, or made a navigation error, Muller said.

It is possible that the whale could extend its stay in the city for several months, she added, although locks and rapids further upstream would likely prevent it from exploring any further west.

A team from RQUMM has been deployed to monitor the humpback to prevent any possible collisions with ships, she said, although there were no plans to redirect the whale yet, since it could survive for a short while in freshwater.

"For the moment, the whale is in good health... The best option is to let nature take its course," and hope that the animal decides to return to the open ocean itself, she added.
