OUR CORRESPONDENT, Lalmonirhat

Swapnabuni, a local voluntary organisation, has recently started distributing food among the flood-hit families in different char areas of the Brahmaputra and Dharla rivers in Kurigram Sadar upazila.

On Monday, they started providing the cooked food to the families marooned by floodwater, said journalist Yusuf Alamgir, director of the organisation, adding that they distributed khichuri (hotchpotch) among 400 families on the day.

More than 1600 flood-hit families in the char areas have got the food assistance from them till now, he said.

With the slogan “Durijge Durbhoge Sathe Achhi Amra”, the members of the organisation have extended their support to those needy families hit by natural disasters in Kurigram, he said.

Since Monday, more than 20 volunteers have been reaching out to the vulnerable families with one-time meal, he said, adding that with donations, they arranged the food package for the families.

They are providing each relief packet containing three hundred and fifty grams khichuri to a person, said Alamgir.

Some solvent people in the society have come forward to support them, he said, adding that they have collected funds from their peers and the solvent people and distributed food to each family in the char areas. Of the solvent people, Morsheda Khatun, an American expatriate engineer, has financially helped them a lot.

“Our volunteers are working hard to reach out to the vulnerable families with food. For example, the volunteers are crossing the river by boat to reach the char areas and distributing food among the flood-hit people,” he said.

Tofazzal Hossain, 55, of Char Nawdabansh in Kurigram Sadar upazila, said they could not cook as the entire area was marooned by floodwater. Floodwater entered their house. Due to this, they only ate dry food.

“In this situation, Swapnabuni has come forward with the cooked food which is really great relief for us,” said Tofazzal.

Hajong youths repair broken bridge at own initiative

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Mymensingh

A group of ethnic Hajong youths voluntarily repaired the broken portion of a bridge in a remote area of Lengura union under Netrakona’s Kalmakanda upazila on Monday.

The 46-foot-long bridge on Gopalbari canal, some half-kilometre away from the Indian border, was constructed under World Vision Bangladesh’s Area Development Programme in Kalmakanda in 2005, said locals.

The small but important bridge, used by people of 10 villages of Lengura and Kharmoi unions to reach different bazaars and Kalmakanda and Durgapur upazila towns, developed breach in the middle portion a year ago, said Sajal Hajong, a member of local Lengura union parishad (UP).

Usually auto-rickshaws and bicycles plied the road for different destinations but after the breach in the bridge, people could use it only to walk across, said Nitya Kumar Hajong, a student at a private university in Dhaka.

“We are now at our village home as the educational institutions are closed due to Covid-19 pandemic. We repaired the bridge with our labour and contribution as further damage to the bridge would make it totally unusable,” said Nayeem Hajong, an honours final year student at Dhaka College.

Shuvra Hajong, who volunteered to repair the road, said more than 50 percent people of the backward area belong to indigenous Hajong and Garo communities.

“As the broken bridge was not repaired in a year, we the youths, mostly students, joined hands to do it with the initiative of UP member Sajal Hajong,” said Shuvra, a first-year student at Shahjalal University of Science and Technology.

Md Saidur Rahman Bhuiyan, chairman of Lengura UP, said he provided assistance to the youths to repair the bridge.
