Fixing phantom bridges over nothing

LGED's dodgy Tk 46cr tender cancelled in Barguna; probe begins

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Patuakhali

At places, there are no canals where they were said to exist. In other places, iron bridges that were supposed to be there are missing, with bamboo bridges taking their place at some sites.

Tenders have been invited for repair of iron bridges that apparently exist only on papers in Barguna's Amtali and Taltoli upazilas.

The irregularities cropped up when, on July 28, Forkan Ahmed Khan, executive engineer of the Local Government Engineering Department (LGED) in Barguna, invited tenders for repair of 33 iron bridges in eight packages at a cost of about Tk 46 crore.

A three-member probe committee has been formed to look into the matter, Forkan said. The committee started investigating and the report will be submitted soon, said its chief.

The LGED invited tenders under the Iron Bridge Reconstruction Project (IBRP) for the 2020-21 financial year. Among the bridges, 25 are in Amtali and eight in Taltoli upazilas. The deadline for participation in the tender was fixed on September 14.

Contractors of Barguna and Amtali held a press conference and arranged a human chain demanding cancellation of the tenders.

The LGED executive engineer of Barguna wrote a letter to the chief engineer of LGED on August 28 asking for Tenders had been invited for repairing 33 "iron bridges", including this one, that apparently exist only on paper in Barguna's Amtali and Taltoli upazilas. Of the bridges, 13 are actually bamboo-made footbridges. The tenders were cancelled following graft allegation.

ATTACK ON UNO TIB demands judicial probe into motive

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Transparency International Bangladesh yesterday said the actual motive behind the attack on UNO Wahida Khanam should be found out through a judicial probe.

Saying that the gruesome attack was aimed at stealing is an ill-attempt, the graft watchdog said in a statement and urged the government to ensure exemplary punishment of the real culprits after identifying them through the probe.

It is very frustrating that such a grievous incident has been described as "mere theft" and "stray incident" based on primary confession of a suspect, said TIB Executive Director Iftekharuzzaman.

He referred to media reports that the officer became the target because of her firm stance against corruption, illegal sand lifting, and brick kilns in Ghoraghat upazila of Dinajpur.

Trump calls on the media to fire reporter in war dead controversy

AGENCIES

US President Donald Trump has demanded the Fox News network fire its national security correspondent after she confirmed claims he had disparaged the military - a bombshell that has dogged him for two days.

Trump came under fire after The Atlantic magazine reported he had called marines killed in action in the World War I "losers" and "suckers" in connection with a November 2018 visit to France in which he skipped a visit to a United States' military cemetery.

Fox News correspondent Jennifer Griffin on Saturday said two former administration officials had confirmed to her the president "did not want to drive to honour American war dead" at the Aisne-Marne cemetery outside Paris, implying weather was not a factor.

One official also told her Trump had used the word "suckers" to denigrate the military, but in a different context related to the Vietnam War.

"When the president spoke about the Vietnam War, he said, 'It was a stupid

COVID VACCINE 90pc of Sinovac staffers, families took it

Says CEO of Chinese firm

REUTERS, Beijing

About 90 percent of Sinovac Biotech Ltd employees and their families have taken an experimental coronavirus vaccine developed by the Chinese firm under the country's emergency use programme, its chief executive said yesterday.

The extent of inoculations under the emergency programme, which China launched in July but has released few details about, points to how actively it is using experimental vaccines in the hopes of protecting essential workers against a potential Covid-19 resurgence, even as trials are still underway.

The programme is intended for specific groups, including medical staffers and those who work at food markets and in the transportation and service sectors.

Sinovac, whose CoronaVac is in Phase 3 clinical trials and has been included in the emergency scheme, offered the candidate vaccine to approximately 2,000 to 3,000 employees and their families on a voluntary basis, CEO Yin Weidong told Reuters.

"As a vaccine developer and manufacturer, a new outbreak could directly impact our vaccine production," Yin said on the sidelines of an international trade fair in Beijing, explaining why his company was included in the emergency programme.

Data gathered from the programme could offer evidence of the vaccine's safety, but such data, which is not part of
