Pay or die

Stories behind 'gunfights' and the human cost of OC Pradeep's 'rule' in Teknaf

ZYMA ISLAM and MOHAMMAD ALI JINNAT

With suspended officer-in-charge of Teknaf Police Station Pradeep Kumar Das now behind bars over the killing of retired army major Sinha, stories are unearthed about the unwritten law of the upazila town: you pay, you live.

You bargain or you don't pay -- you mysteriously die in a "gunfight" that will happen in the middle of the night at some remote beach.

Yasmin Akhter's husband Hasan Ali was a "source" of the Border Guard Bangladesh -- not only does she proudly admit this, she also calls it "a service to the nation".

As the owner of a fleet of 40 fishing trawlers which he leased to sea-faring fishermen, Hasan was the perfect informant, since he had eyes and ears all over the sea looking out for shipments of yaba coming in from Myanmar.

According to his wife, this was also a quick way to make money since he received a handsome commission from the BGB for every haul. But it was also a quick way to make enemies in a town where Hasan's closest neighbours are all yaba traders.

He got so rich ruining their livelihoods that he could afford to plaster every square inch of the walls and floors of his one-storey home with the fanciest golden-veined ceramic tiles.

Hasan was picked up by Teknaf police on October 27, 2018 from south Jaliyapara where he was mending torn fishing nets, alleged his wife.

"He was picked up at 10:30am. The fishermen saw him being taken away by the police. He had no cases against him, nor was he a listed drug trader."

When Yasmin went looking for him at the police station, she was allegedly told by the then OC Pradeep that she needs to hand over Tk 50 lakh to get her husband released, only being charged with Section 54 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

"I said that I can give only Tk 20 lakh. I sold all the gold jewelry I had and met two policemen -- an assistant sub-inspector and a constable -- behind the Eidgah field at

Govt working on a $550m scheme

REJAUL KARIM BYRON and MOHIUDDIN ALAMGIR

The government has undertaken a programme worth $550 million with an aim to procure and distribute coronavirus vaccines.

The authorities concerned are currently in negotiation with the World Bank and the Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank (AIIB) for a loan of $400 million for the programme.

Rest of the amount would be contributed by the government, said officials.

According to a top official of the Ministry of Finance, the ministry officials have been in discussion with the World Bank for a $200 million loan since August and with the AIIB for another $200 million since September.

Finance Minister AHM Mustafa Kamal had talked with AIIB President Jin Lique over phone about the loan in the last week of September and the AIIB president responded to him positively, he said.

Pro-govt clerics at Qwami helm

RASHIDUL HASAN

Tensions continue to brew between pro- and anti-government leaders from Hefajat-e-Islam and Qwami madrasas over securing the top posts of the Chattogram-based Islamist group, Qwami Madrasa Education Board (Befaq), and Al-Haiyatul Uliia Lil-Jamiatil Qwamia Bangladesh, which is the highest level of Qwami madrasa education in the country.

The posts fell vacant at the same time with the demise of Shah Ahmad Shafi on September 18.

The two sides have also reportedly engaged in a grave dispute over establishing grip on Hefajat, which came to the fore for its massive rally in the capital's Shapla Chattar on May 5 in 2013, and its stronghold Hathazari madrasa in Chattogram.

When this in the situation, the executive committee of Befaq elected Maulana Mahmudul Hasan, principal of Jatrabari madrasa and khatib of Gulshan Azad Mosque in the capital, as the board's acting chairman yesterday. He defeated his rival candidate Maulana Nur Hossain Kasemi.

As ex officio, Mahmudul would also become the acting chairman of Al-Haiyatul Uliia Lil-Jamiatil Qwamia Bangladesh.

Multiple sources in Hefajat and Befaq said Mahmudul is considered to be a pro-government Islamic cleric, while Kasemi is a top leader in the BNP-led 20-party alliance and also the secretary general of Jomiat-e Ullamae Islam, a component in the alliance.

Yesterday's meeting was held at the head office of Bangladesh Qwami Madrasa Education Board at Kajla, Jatrabari in Dhaka.

Hefajat leaders and several members of the Befaq executive committee told this correspondent that Mahmudul was elected because of government lobbying.

TRUMP IN HOSPITAL

Election concerns grip White House

Conflicting reports emerge about his condition

AGENCIES

White House officials sought to project an air of business as usual despite President Donald Trump's Covid-19 diagnosis and hospitalisation, but aides privately expressed concern about the presidential election and showed signs of rising worry about the coronavirus.

"The business of government continues," economic adviser Larry Kudlow told reporters after Trump disclosed on Twitter on Friday that he had tested positive for the coronavirus.

Trump flew by helicopter to Walter Reed Medical Center for treatment in the early evening. But staff members said he would continue working from a special suite there and that he had remained engaged in governing throughout the day. He did not transfer power to Vice President Mike Pence.

In an 18-second video recorded inside the White House and released on Twitter, Trump broke his silence, saying he was being hospitalised but "I think I'm doing very well."

"We're going to make sure that things work out," he said, adding that First Lady Melania Trump -- who also contracted the virus -- was "doing very well."

It'll test public transport drivers and people before joining jobs, enrolling for higher edu

MOHAMMAD JAMIL KHAN

As a part of intensifying and strengthening narcotics control across the country, the government has taken steps to form an independent institution to carry out dope tests in a structural manner.

The dope tests will be conducted mainly for higher education admissions and for entrance in the job and the transport sectors, with the latter being one of the bigger reasons for the formation of the institute.

The decision was taken at the last meeting of Parliamentary Standing Committee on Ministry of Home Affairs

It would be formed following the structure of Bangladesh Standards & Testing Institution (BSTI) and will monitor and ensure dope test in all job sectors and will also take steps to make sure that tests are conducted before admission in any educational institutes for higher degree and again before the final examination of the degree.
