'Middlemen' in labour migration to be regularised, says ministry secy

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The government has agreed on principle to bring "middlemen" in the labour migration sector under an accountability framework, expatriates' welfare ministry secretary Ahmed Munir Saleheen said yesterday.

"We no longer want to think whether it should be done or not. Instead, we want how it can be done," he told an online discussion organised by Refugee and Migratory Movements Research Unit (RMMRU).

The secretary made the remarks amid demands from migrant rights groups that middlemen, also known as sub-agents, should be brought under accountability to ensure safe and orderly migration.

The discussion on the topic, "Streamlining Labour Recruitment through Regularisation of Middlemen" was part of RMMRU's e-symposium series "Build Back Better" on Covid-19 and migration.

Addressing the discussion, Saleheen said under the existing legal framework, there is no provision for employment of middlemen.

However, as per law, each recruiting agent after getting approval from the Bureau of Manpower, Employment and Training (BMET) can employ required number of "representatives" at home and abroad, he said.

He stressed that such provision could be considered while regularising middlemen.

Anisul Islam Mahmud, chairman of the parliamentary standing committee on expatriates' welfare and overseas employment ministry, said different recruiting agents have sub-agents employed unofficially across the country.

"We want those sub-agents to be registered," he said, adding BMET should be the main focal point for the registration process.

Those who have already been involved in the sector will do the job, said Anisul.

Early last week, Bhowmik filed the petition with the HC following a report published on The Daily Star on September 29 under the headline, "No better than a jail", describing the violation of fundamental rights of children and their miserable condition in the child development centres.

Victim, family charged by relatives of arrested 'human trafficker'

OUR CORRESPONDENT, M'singh

Family members of an alleged human trafficker reportedly launched an attack on the residence of one of the victims right after he was arrested by Rapid Action Battalion on Saturday at Gafargaon upazila of Mymensingh.

The family of the trafficking victim -- Mohammad Tajuddin -- had to flee their home out of fear, said his brother Rafiqul Islam.

They were able to go back to their residence with police intervention, he added.

On Saturday afternoon, Rab-14 arrested Md Asad (25) of Ghagra village after three human trafficking victims -- Abdur Rahman (35), his nephew Tajuddin (35) and neighbor Masum (22) -- filed three cases against Asad and his elder brother Kamruzzaman Kajal (45) with a Mymensingh court for the duo's alleged involvement in trafficking them to Vietnam in December last year, said Rab sources.

Rab raided the area and arrested Asad around 2:30pm, said Sub-inspector Indrajit Roy. Kajal managed to flee, he added.

Asad was being interrogated at the Rab office in Mymensingh as of filing this report.

Regarding the attack, Anukul Sarker, officer-in-charge of Gafargaon Police Station, said, "We visited the spot, and are looking into the matter."

Tajuddin, one of the victims, said the accused took Tk 4.2 lakh from each of them to send them to Vietnam on December 25 last year, promising jobs with Tk 30,000 per month salary.

They managed the money mostly by selling land and on loan, he said.

After reaching Vietnam, three Bangladeshis received them.

Tajuddin said the three held them captive. "We were forced to work for them," he added. After working for two months, when they demanded salary, they were tortured, alleged Tajuddin.

At one stage, they managed to flee, and surrendered to Vietnam police, who handed them over to the Bangladesh embassy. They returned home in August, he added.

"The traffickers are influential. At first we informed locals and tried to realise the money through arbitration but they did not respond. They refused to return the money," said Tajuddin's brother Rafiqul.

"We then informed police and eventually filed the cases," he said.

He alleged that right after Asad's arrest, his family members and relatives tried to attack them with rods and sticks.

"We had to flee to save ourselves," he said, adding, "We were able to return home the same day with police intervention." This correspondent could not get in touch with Asad's family members, despite repeated attempts.

WOMEN OF COASTAL AREAS

Their lives riddled with challenges: speakers

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Women of coastal and flood-prone areas are already marginalised and now there is added challenge of Amphan, early marriage, the added burden of unpaid care work, destroyed livelihood, and gender-based violence, said speakers at an online roundtable yesterday.

The event, titled "Pandemic and Disaster: Life of Climate-Vulnerable Women and Girls", was jointly organised by Manusher Jonno Foundation (MJF) and The Daily Star.

"We have to think about the future steps of the government and the non-government organisations to overcome the negative impact of the pandemic and disasters," said MJF Executive Director Shaheen Anam.

"Early marriage has a long impact on the health of the girls, which will increase the number of unwanted pregnancies, and we have to think about them. Besides, there must be proper measures taken for those girls who are staying at home, exposed to the vulnerabilities, and they must be brought to schools again," she added.

Dr Fazle Rabbi Sadeque Ahmed, director (Environment and Climate Change) of Palli Karma-Sahayak Foundation highlighted that along with the government, the private sector should also come forward for the betterment of women and girls of informal sectors and marginalised areas.

"We have to identify grassroots women and girls who have been badly impacted by the pandemic and disaster, and they must be given proper support. If they can be empowered economically, they will be able to take a decision, he said.

A recent study jointly conducted by MJF and Inspira Advisory and Consulting in September also found that cyclone shelters of six upazilas of four coastal districts -- Barguna, Satkhira, Gaibandha and Rangamati -- were not women-friendly at all.

According to Muntasir Tahmed Chowdhury of Inspira, who shared the survey findings at the roundtable, the

2nd phase of municipal elections in mid-January

EC revokes registration of PDP

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The Election Commission has cancelled the registration of Progressive Democratic Party (PDP) as a political party as it failed to meet the condition of maintaining the registration.

"The commission has revoked the registration of Progressive Democratic Party," EC Senior Secretary Md Alamgir told The Daily Star after a commission meeting held yesterday evening at its office in the capital.

"We cancelled the registration as PDP is failing to meet the conditions of keeping their registration. Our probe has found that they do not have sufficient infrastructures like offices at district and other levels. They do not have sufficient number of committee members," he said, adding that the party has not even held councils in years.

The Daily Star called PDP secretary general Principal MA Hossain several times but his mobile phone was found switched off.

Party Chairman Ferdous Ahmed Qureshi died in September this year.

PDP was formed in 2007 during the military-backed interim government. According to the EC, a party needs to have a functional central office, by the name it may be called, with a central committee, have offices at least in one-third of administrative districts, and offices at least in 100 upazilas or metropolitan thanas. The party must have at least 200 voters as members in each upazila. There are 41 registered political parties under the EC.

Alamgir while talking to reporters after the meeting said municipality elections will be held in four phases. He said elections of second, third and fourth phases will take place in mid-January, end of January and mid-February respectively.

On average, 60 municipalities will go to polls in each of the three phases. Elections to 30 municipalities in each phases will take place using electronic voting machines.

On November 22, the EC announced schedule for the first phase of elections to 25 municipalities, setting the date on December 28.
