OPEC to defend falling oil price

NICOSIA, Feb 18: OPEC might turn a consultative meeting next month into an extraordinary session that could take decisions to defe ad falling oil prices. OPEC Secretary-General Subroto was quoted s saying today, reports

OPEC Oil Ministers are clue to meet in Vienna on' March 11 for their first conference since the Gulf war began on January 17 amid fears oil prices would tumble to be low 10 Dollars a barrel once the fighting stopped.

Subroto told the Libyan news agency Jana that the 13member Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries was concerned oil prices could deteriorate further during the second quarter of this year because the market was awash with surplus crude.

"The essential issue that is of concern to the organisation at present, is the deterioration of oil prices

They added that the figure did not include the cost of the unprecedented oil spill in the Gulf which is expected to run into the billions of dollars.

One western diplomat said the 48 billion dollars spent included funding for military hardware, maintenance contracts, "burden-sharing"
