Saudi coast devastated by oil spill

RIYADH, May 14 : The world's biggest oil spill has devastated Saudi Arabia's northeast coast but large areas' of the Gulf may have had a lucky escape. Saudi environmentalists said recently, reports Reuter.

A combination of hot sunshine and slow moving currents could have protected much of the waterway from up to six million barrels of oil which poured into the sca from Iraqi, Kuwaiti, and Saudi installations and tankers damaged during the Gulf war.

Environmentalists believe the Gulf's high salinity made the off float on the surface, leaving it to evaporate under the blazing sun. Meanwhile, Kuwait plans to resume crude oil production for the local market next month at a rate of 50,000 barrels per day (BPD), rising to 120,000 BPD in July.
