Italian parties forced to declare truce, elect Scalfaro president

ROME, May 26: Shock waves from a Mafia bomb forced Italy's squabbling par ties to declare a truce and elect Christian democrat vet eran Oscar Luigi Scalfaro, a devout Catholic, as the country's ninth president, reports Reuter.

Politicians breathed a sigh of relief. It took them 16 ballots over nearly two weeks to find a president.

Scalfaro, 73, won by a wide margin on Monday after the three largest political parties, buffeted by the weekend murder of Italy's top anti-Mafia fighter, united behind him and enlisted the support of several other parties.

"(The election) has been tormented process which has ended in the best of ways," said Arnaldo Forlani, who resigned as Christian Democrat party secretary after his own candidacy failed.
