Installation of effluent treatment plant suggested

By Masud Arif

Most of the big industries in the country are seriously polluting the water bodies and neighbouring agricultural lands as they do not have any effluent treatment plant.

The industries like sugar and a sugar-based industries, pulp and paper, dyeing, drycell, pharmaceuticals etc. are polluting the environment as the industrial effluents are not treated before disposal to prevent physical and biological pollution of the receiving body of water.

A few months ago the Department of Biochemistry of the Dhaka University and Environmental Laboratory of Envirocare Limited, Dhaka jointly conducted a comparative study on environmental pollution with reference to effluents from sugar and sugar-based industries in the country.

The study was conducted on the Carew and Company, a sugar-based industry situated on the river Mathavanga at Darshana, Kushtia and Jamuna Distillery Limited, situated near the bank of the river Naroda in Natore.

The researchers observed that the effluents from these sugar and distillery industries contain molasses, carbohydrate, reducing sugar, inorganic and organic matters etc. which are highly capable to disrupt the harmony of the aquatic environment unless treated properly prior to discharge.

The researchers also compared physicochemical parameters with the standard values for the industrial effluents provided by the Ministry of Environment.

It was found in the study that the distillery was causing more pollution than the sugar industries.

The study was conducted by H U Shekhar, Md. Emdadul Haque and M Rahman of the Department of Biochemistry and S A Hossain and Zaki Yusuf of Envirocare Limited.

The researchers suggested that it was essential to install effluent treatment plant in all the environmental polluting industries and to maintain the standard values for the industrial effluents provided by the Government.

Some industries in private sector have already been started controlling the effluents quality standard, researchers mentioned.

As most of the big industries are situated by the river side, the water and the neighbouring lands are being polluted.

The researchers felt that more research are to be conducted regarding industrial pollution in the country.
