ager of the linkage project also spoke on the occasion.
Prof Shahjahan said Bangladesh has more than 24000 kilometers of rivers, streams and canals that together cover 7 percent of the country's surface area. He urged to maintain and develop these natural waterways at a fraction of the cost of new roads and railways. Prof Shahjahan stressed the need for active and managed waterways to drain-away the excess water and to minimise the dangerous rises level and subsequent flooding.
The workshop will cover several topics on principles of water and sediment movement, morphological computation, scale modelling of river engineering problems and design and structural aspects of river training works.
Sixty five engineers and officials from different government, semi- government and autonomous organisations are participating in the workshop.
