US, Russia ask Ukraine to surrender N-arms

VANCOUVER, Apr 5: The United States and Russia turned up the heat on Ukraine on Sunday to surrender the nuclear weapons it inherited from the former Soviet Union, reports Reuter.

US President Bill Clinton told a news conference that he and Russian president Boris Yeltsin had agreed at their Vancouver summit on the need for Ukraine to join Belarus and Kazakhstan in acceding to two key nuclear treaties.

These are the Start-1 strategic arms reduction treaty, signed by the United States and the Soviet Union in 1991, and the 1968 nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty

Belarus and Kazakhstan have already ratified Start-1, but Ukraine has not yet done so. Some Ukrainian politicians say the country should hold on for the time being to strategic missiles inherited from the Soviet arsenal. Belarus has also signed the NPT and Kazakhstan has promised to do so. Ukraine is delaying on this too, although a parliamentary debate on nuclear policy is expected in Kiev

Clinton said he and Yeltsin had discussed during their two-day summit "the need to ensure that Ukraine, along with Belarus and Kazakhstan, ratify the START treaty and accede to the NPT as non-nuclear weapon states."

Under the NPT, non-nuclear weapon states pledge not to acquire atomic arms and nuclear weapon states promise not to transfer them to those who do not have them.

Russia, Ukraine, Belarus and Kazakhstan were the four republics holding strategic weapons on their territory when the Soviet Union broke up at the end of 1991.

By big-power agreement, Russia has inherited the mantle of the Soviet Union as a nuclear power, but the other three republics promised last year to give up their nuclear intercontinental missiles and 30 bombers with an estimated 416 warheads of bombs and cruise missiles.

The ability to use these is held not by the Ukrainian government but the joint command of the Commonwealth of Independent States, successor to the Soviet command. But Kiev's permission is fequired to remove or dismantle them.

A major concern among Ukrainians is that Russia might at some time move to re-establish control over their country.

This fear has given Ukrainian nationalists an argument for refusing to surrender their strategie weapons, and Ukraine has demanded security guarantees. A senior US diplomat recently predicted Washington and Moscow would soon begin putting economic pressure on Ukraine if Kiev did not agree to fulfil its commitments to abandon nuclear weapons.

Meanwhile, President Yeltsin warned Latvia and Estonia on Sunday that they must guarantee the rights of Russian minorities in order to ensure Moscow's adherence to its agreed schedule of Sovietera troop withdrawals.

Yeltsin, whose giant Russian federation assumed control of Soviet forces in the Baltics after the communist superpower collapsed, said the treatment of local Russians would determine the pace and scope of the withdrawal. "We will be scheduling the actual withdrawal in line with what they decide in the human rights area," Yeltsin said. The Russian leader drew a sharp contrast with neighbouring Lithuania, where he said man rights. "We are adhering very closely to the schedule on troop withdrawals from Lithuania and we're completing work on that since Lithuania does not violate human rights and treats the Russian-speaking population fairly," he said.
