Can the bank officials do what the Finance Minister asking them to do?

Dr M Shamsul Haque

For quite some time the Finance Minister and others in the government have been emphasising the importance of what might be called as "progressing banking" by the NCB and DFIs. They have been urging upon bank officers to seek out "good projects" for lending with minimal collateral requirements - more specifically quality of borrowers are to be given more weight rather than the value of collaterals. The latest in this series of invectives has been the establishment of "investment cells" within banks to accelerate bank lending to good projects and thereby accelerate the rate of investment activity in the country. While these are very important activities and goals to be pursued by the government there are reasons to believe that not much expected output will be generated. This is so because banks in this country, or more specifically bank officials have had very little experience in investment decision making under risk return parameters in business. Besides lacking in experience in investment banking, human resources in the state owned banks are also not of the high quality which is required for Officials who were recruited by the then banks during Pakistan period, at the most used to decide about short term investment in working capital in their own business as well as government enterprises. As is well known the investment decision making scene deteriorated even further for these bank officials since the liberation of Bangladesh.

This has happened due to the institution of a regime of nationalised enterprises and directed credit with administered interest rates. Most of the executive level officers in these banks did not have sufficient exposure to the kind of investment decision making currently being demanded of them by the government. Needless to mention, these officials in these banks have also participated in the process of creation of the "default culture" which has eroded the capital base of these banks and made them more vulnerable

And it is also known to us that very few MBAs are working in the nationalised banking sector for a variety of reasons. Since im-. provement in investment decision making in these banks, whether they remain in the public sector or not, is essential the government must act now to upgrade the quality of human resources in those banks for efficient operations under competitive environ-

While various skill improvement training programmes have been set up for bank officials under various schemes, such as FSRP, it may be worthwhile to explore other options for selected groups of existing junior/midlevel officers. IBA in association with other institutions can organise special courses of 4-6 months duration for those with appropriate backgrounds. For long term improvement of human resources in these banks more serious efforts, however, must be made to recruit, train and retain relatively better quality of human resources at least for the investment banking functions. Without these efforts "professionalism" is not likely to grow in the financial sector in Bangladesh and the sector as a whole will continue to fail to play its important role in economic development in

Price hike of fertilizers hits IRRI, boro cultivation

From Our Correspondent

JESSORE, Apr. 12: Pricehike of chemical for life, and other agriculture inputs have adversely affected cultivation of IRRI and boro crops in ten districts of Khulna division during the current dry season.

It is learnt, that prices of urea, TSP, zinc, amonia sulphate have got up exorbitantly. As a result the poor larmers are unable to use required quantity of fertilizers in the fields. Thus the production likely to be stored by with

5,50,984 tonnes of boro production likely in Barisal zone

BARISAL, Apr 12: A total of 5,50,984 metric tons of boro'paddy is expected to be produced in 66 thanas of cleven southern districts of Barisal Agriculture Zone (BAZ) in the current boro season, reports

The districts are: Barisal, Jhalakati, Bhola, Pirojpur Patuakhali, Barguna, Faridpur, Madaripur, Gopalgonj, Rajbari and Shariatpur. According to an official source, boro has been cultivated on 2,26,425 hectares in these districts this year. Bangladesh Agriculture

Development Corporation (BADC) sold 1,61,080 kilograms of boro seeds among the farmers of these districts.

Agriculture Extension Department has taken up 400 demonstration plots to teach the farmers modern methods of boro cultivation, the source

BADC installed 5,020 power pumps, 405 deep and 8,831 shallow tube wells and 1,075 hand driven tubewells to make the boro cultivation a success. BADC also supplied fertilizers, insecticides and other inputs among the farmers.

Besides, different government and commercial banks distributed loans among the farmers for boro cultivation. the source said.

Dhaka Stock Prices

At the close of trading on April 12, 1993

Transactions improve

Trading performance at the Dhaka Stock share market slightly improved on Monday although the All Share Price Index continued to slide down.

Most prices fell on the day with relatively larger sizes in percentage. Monospool Paper, Shine Pukur Jute, Progressive Plastic and Singer Bangladesh were among worst sufferers. Twerityone shares lost against only six gainers. Price changes among gainers were hardly noticed except in the share of Bangladesh Lamps which showed a price hike of 2.56 per cent. Trading at unchanged rates totalled seven.

Both volume and value gained figures. Volume advanced to 4,318 issues from Sunday's 3,395 issue, an increase of 27.18 per cent. Value finished at Taka 490286.00 from Sunday's close of Taka 312867.50, showing a rise of 56.70 per cent.

Despite the day's improvement in trading performance, transactions still appeared far too poor. Figures in volume and value still fluctuate within the range of five to six digits in values case while figures in volumes table move within four

Activities of company's shares trading on the floor still appear dull. Stocks participating in business hardly exceed the number forty. Mostly, they range between thirty and twentyfive in general

The Composite Index continued to roll down hill. It further lost 0.121 point closing at 387.8396 from Sunday's
