The Bangladesh (Freedom Fighters) Welfare Trust (Amendment) Dill, 1993, was passed seeking to reorganise the Freedom Fighters Welfare Trust Board under the leadership of the Prime Minister to cope with the present democratic parliamentary system. Piloting the amendment bill,

Agriculture Minister Majidul Huq who is also in-charge of Defence Ministry in the House, said the aims and objectives of the bill was to ensure an adequate representation of the people's representatives in the trust board with the Prime Minister and Leader of the House as the chairperson of the board. Brushing aside all the allegations of the opposition members about the politicalisation of the trust board, Haq said the amendment was necessary for the democratisation of the trust and cleansing it of all undemocratic work done during the autocratic regime.

There was only one public representative in the trust, he said adding the amendment now would increase it to six. You have no reason to worry, the Minister assured the House and added the Prime Minister would be the chairperson and she would nominate one freedom fighter minister as vicechairman and four freedom fighter MPs as its trustees.

The Securities and Exchange Commission Bill, 1993 was passed seeking the constitution of a Securities and Exchange Commission for the healthy development of capital market and ensuring smooth functioning of the share market in the coun-

The Jatiya Sangsad also passed the Securities and Exchange (Amendment) Bill, 1993, protecting the investors fund and providing a very clear guideline for the investors, both domestic and overseas, in order to flourish the share market.

Piloting both the bills, Finance Minister M Saifur Rahman said the establishment of the Securities and Exchange Commission would pave the way for capital market development as well as restore investors' confidence in the suck exchange which itself would be streamlined with the enactment of these two bills.

These two bills, Rahman said aimed at acceleration of investments, protection of the interest of the investors and help develop a cohesive regulatory institution to control the capital market.

The Finance Minister said these two bills were to let the share market come out of the bureaucratic process.

The Securities and Exchange Commission, Rahman pointed out, is the apex body and would supervise and control the activi-ties of the securities market and stock exchange and issue capi-

The commission, he said, is a statutory body and would consist of a chairman and two full-time members and two nominated members. The Securities and Exchange (Amendment) Bill, 1993, the minister said was actually an amalgam of the Securities and Exchange Ordinance, 1969 and Capital Issues (Control of continuance) Act, 1947.

Listing various regulatory agencies related to it, the Finance Minister said as a result 'securities' issue is relatively complex in Bangladesh and that is why this amendment bill have been piloted to remove these complexities.

The Finance Minister tabled both the bills on May 12, 1992.
