World faces a crucial moment of decision, warns GATT chief

WASHINGTON, July 22: The new outspoken chief of the international trade body GATT warned yesterday that the world faces a 'Crucial moment of decision" - either strike a global trade deal or risk all-out protectionism, reports Reuter. Peter Sutherland issued the ultimatum at the end of his first trip to the United States since becoming Director General of the Geneva-based General Agreement n Tariffs and Trade.

"Some would say this is the hardest job in the world," he said in an interview. They're not far off - but I personally believe it's worth doing."

The Irish banker-lawyer on a crusade to finish by yearend the so-called Uruguay Round of talks meant to reform world trade - also said he is now sure that President Clinton shares his mission.

The trip that I have had convinces me that the administration is determined to get a multilateral package through, said Sutherland, who assumed his post July 1.

But despite all the recent talks of a tariff-cutting deal among major world trading Congress reflects a myriad of different opinions and views, but there's an overriding understanding that it would be a catastrophic political, as well as economic, decision to reject the multilateral process, he said.

India's bond scam

JPC splits over steps against foreign banks

NEW DELHI, July 22: An Indian parliamentary panel probing a 1.3 billion dollar bank and stock scandal is divided over action to be taken against four foreign banks involved in the scam, newspapers reported Wednesday, reports AFP.

Opinions among members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee (JPC) who met here late Tuesday ranged from winding up the foreign banks or closing them down temporarily to unspecified "stern action," the dailies said.

The four banks whose involvement in the bank and securities scam has been documented by JPC are Citibank, Bank of America, Standard Chartered and ANZ Grindlays.

A JPC report last month described the foreign banks as the "initiators (and) major play ers" of the fraud, which involved bankers and brokers who skimmed money from banks to play the stock market until the scam was unearthed in 1992.

"Some of them did things which even their corporate of fice prohibited them to do," JPC Chairman Ram Niwas Mirdha said July 8. 'They did what constitutes a criminal act in their own countries."

On Tuesday, Yashwant Sinha, a JPC member, demanded that foreign banks involved in the scam should be wound up, demand that was opposed by MPs from Prime Minister PV Narasimha Rao's Congress [1] Party.

But Sinha, an opposition MP, persisted with his demand, lashing out in particular to Citibank. Gurudas Dasgupta, a communist, backed Sinha.

Jaipal Reddy, a colleague of Sinha, said the four banks should be ordered to wind up their operations in India for last one year.

The Congress (I) MPs also demanded "strong action" against the foreign banks, but the party's Mani Shankar Aiyer dubbed the opposition demand for their closure as irresponsi-

Only "legal action should be pursued against (the) foreign banks," he said.

The bank and securities scam has shaken India's banking industry. The investigation took dramatic turn after the prime accused, stockbroker Harshad Mehta, alleged giving a payoff to the Prime Minister.

Market-oriented economy in China likely by 2000

BEIJING, July 22: China is considering setting the year 2000 as the target for completion of its transition from a centrally planned to a market-oriented economy, a high official was quoted as saying, reports Reuter.

State councillor Li Tieying said the proposal is under consideration by the state commission for restructuring the economic system, which he heads, China's official Xinhua news agency reported from Manila, where Li is visiting.

The commission is now considering to make the suggestion that China should complete the process of building an economic system which should be basically oriented by market forces by the year 2000," Li told Philippines President Fidel Ramos.

We are now conducting intensified research, which includes studying the mechanisms of other countries' market competition."

Among the countries under study is the Philippines, with its aggressive experiments with macro-economic policy, enterprise restructuring and market rivalry regulations, Xinhua said.

Li's 11-persons delegation also will inspect market mechanisms in Singapore and Hong Kong.

Li said the ongoing reforms in China aim basically to replace what he called an over centralised planning system, but cautioned that this is not to cast aside planning altogether.

"What we have been doing is seeking for a combination of planning and market in which both would play to the full their positive roles," Li said, a concept the communist leadership has enshrined in the constitution as a socialist market econ-

Tax evasion trial begins in Japan

Kanemaru pleads not guilty

TOKYO, July 22: Fallen political kingpin Shin Kanemaru pleaded innocent to tax evasion charges Thursday in a trial that could further upset Japan's turbulent political scene, reports AP.

The aged former lawmaker argued that the billions of ven (millions of dollar) he had amassed was untaxable income used solely to fund political ac-"I had no intention to hide my wealth in order to evade income taxes," Kanemaru said in a statement read to the court in his trademark gravelly voice. It was kept for political funding, not to hide wealth. Later Thursday, Prime Minister Klichi Miyazwa - one of several colleagues Kanemaru raised to the pinnacle of leadership — announced to members of his Liberal Democratic Party that he would resign as party president. The announcement set off a hot debate about how to choose his successor.

Miyazawa said he was taking responsibility for the party's failure to win a majority in lower house elections Sunday — Md Jahangir Hossain and an embarrassment that resulted partly from the corruption allegations surrounding Kanemaru.

Kanemaru, 78, arrived at Tokyo District Court amid tight security and was bundled into a wheelchair for his appearance.

During the 90-minute hearing, prosecutors said Kanemaru had taken as much as one billion yen (9.25 million dollar) a year in clandestine donations, mostly from construction companies. Those sums, they argued, far exceeded the costs of his political activities.

The prosecutors said Kanemaru sought to hide the extra income by surreptitiously buying bonds, which he later sold for cash that he stashed in four cardboard boxes and hid at a relative's home. Later, worried that the cash would be discovered, he bought the bonds back and hid those, they said.

If convicted, Kanemaru faces up to five years in prison and a 5 million yen (46,000 dollar) fine, plus back taxes and penalties.

The next hearing in his trial was set for Sept. 7. Kanemaru's arrest this spring on charges of evading 1.04 billion yen (9.6 million dollar) in taxes on hidden income totaling 1.85 billion yen (17 million dollar) helped precipitate the shakeup inside the Liberal Democratic Party, which has ruled Japan since 1955. When investigators carried safes full of gold bars and bonds out of Kenemarus office, Japanese voters lost patience.

Kanemaru earlier admitted having taken illegal donations from a trucking executive with links to the mob, a disclosure that forced his resignation from parliament last October. But that violation resulted only in small fine under Japan's lax political funding laws.

Kanemaru's trial comes as the Liberal Democrats struggle to put together a majority coalition after winning only 223 out of 511 lower house seats in Sunday's election following the defection of several dozen law-Those legislators have sought to distance themselves from Kanemaru, their former mentor, and have set up their own pro-reform groups. The trial could implicate the new reformists, as well as coalition to oust the Liberal Democrats. Kanemaru's former aide. Masahisa Haibara, 49, also went on trial Thursday
