World Bank wants Arabs to learn from Asians

DUBAI (United Arab Emirates), Nov 4: The World Bank wants Arab states to learn from Asian nations in their bid to tackle persistent economic problems and cut reliance on foreign markets, reports AFP.

In a study presented Tuesday to an investment conference in Dubai, United Arab Emirates (UAE), the World Bank said economic reforms in most Arab countries were slow while investment was facing hurdles in the technology-hungry Gulf states.

"When we talk to officials for example in Egypt or Jordan about the need to accelerate reforms, they compare themselves with their situation in the past and say they have made great achievements", the bank said.

"But in fact, they are lagging behind because such moves in the world, especially in Asia, are not walking but running. In comparison, there is a big distance between Arab countries

Egypt, Jordan and other Arab states have launched reforms to heal their economies. which are reeling under sharp debt, slow growth, high unemployment, poor investments and deficits in the budget and balance of payments. Officials and experts blame state control and political instability.

.Some of them have reported progress by cutting the deficit and boosting investment. But the debt has persisted, standing at 152 billion dollar.

In Egypt, it shrank to nearly 40 billion dollar from 55 billion dollar after Gulf states and other creditors wrote off part of the debt to reward Cairo for its role in the anti-Iraqi coalition during the 1991 war for Kuwait.

"The economic success in all sectors is not only a financial issue but a clear political and scientific process," said the World Bank paper, presented by Ghassan Aranut of the bank's

"Arab states should look at the record success realised by Malaysia. After it depended by 90 per cent on exporting raw materials in 1968, 90 per cent of its exports now area manufactured products.

"If this country maintains current growth rates, then it will overtake industrial nations in 15 years."

But the study saw good economic prospects in Morocco and Tunisia, which it said were surpassing other Arab states in

"These two countries could be considered as promising as they are more advanced in reforms and because of their planned agreements with the European Community in 1994 to set up a free trade zone," it

While oil-rich Gulf states were more attractive for foreign investment because of their modern infrastructure and liberal economies, the study criticised conditions stipulating foreigners must have a local partnership of at least 51 per

The United States and other industrial nations have pressed Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) countries to lift such conditions to secure technology, which is essential for their attempts to build an industrial base and reduce reliance on unstable oil earnings.

"Preventing foreigners from fully owning projects is blocking moves to attract large world ' companies which possess high technology," it said.

Gulf states should also fol-. low a policy similar to Singapore's which concentrates on attracting industries involving high technology and skilled labour.

'Free zones could be helpful but the World Bank prefers that the whole country is turned into a free zone not only a small area."
