Rising interest rates jolt US stock, bond markets

NEW YORK, Nov 6: Early warning signs of trouble for investors flashed more visibly this past week when rising interest rates jolted the stock and bond markets, reports AP.

One of the most conspicuous signals - besides a two-day plunge in the Dow Jones industrial average — was a depending slump in utility stocks, which some øbservers saw as a yellow flag for the charging bull mar-

The performance of utility stocks, the theory goes, can foreshadow broader market movements utilities are vulnerable to changes in interest rates because of the heavy debt loads they typically carry

To Gail Dudack, an invest ment strategist at S.G Warburg and Co. who has experience using utilities as a market guide. there is cause for caution based on the drop in the Dow Jons utility average. The average has surrendered more than 11 per cent since it peaked in mid-September at 256.46.

"I would suggest that things are less favourable, at least temporarily because interest rates have troughed," Dudack said. "What this suggests for the market is that money flows into equities will slow down.

utilities has been diminished by some recent developments, says analysts who advise against attaching marketwide significance to utilities behaviour lately.

First, an industry review conducted by the credit rating agency Standard and Poor's Crop. spooked investors into shunning electric utilities, David Shulman, a Salomon Brothers Inc. strategist, wrote in a recent commentary.

The SandP review resulted in the agency placing the debt of several electric utilities on its CreditWatch with negative implications, meaning the agency might lower the investment rating on the companies' debt. Rating downgrades would make it more expensive for utilities to borrow funds in the future.

Electric utilities are also moving toward a radically dif ferent environment after decades of government regula tion, Prudential Securities Inc. analysts noted in a recent research report. Changes in fed eral regulations prompted by the National Energy Policy Act passed in October 1992 have opened the wholesale power market to greater competition. "We believe that the net result of increased competition will be utility earnings that are less predictable and more volatile, and hence increased risk for investors," the Prudential analysts wrote. "In a more deregulated environment, utilities may have to reconsider their dividend polices." Moreover, takeover speculation sparked by proposed megadeals in the telecommunications field has drawn money away electric utilities.

Despite the mitigating circumstances that might be undermining the usefulness of utility stocks as a forecasting too!, Dudack believes utilities are sending a message worth heeding.

On Friday, the stock market finished with a flourish of buy ing after zigzagging through a jittery session amid worries about rising interest rates.

Renewed buying enthusiasm in the final hour drove up the Dow Jones industrial average and allowed it to end near its best level of the day with a gain of 18.45 at 3,643.43. It lost 37.16 points over a volatile week, reaching new closing highs Monday and Tuesday but losing 73 points over Wednesday and Thursday.

Among broad market indicators, the NYSE composite rose 0.73 to 254.20 Friday but lost 5.18 over the week.

250,000 civil servants go on strike in London

LONDON, Nov 6 : Civil ser vants, from the white collar workers of White Hall to the beefeaters at the tower of London, went on strike yesterday to protest at threats from the private sector to their traditional jobs from life, reports Reuter. As many as 250,000 members of the civil and public services association, working in social security, legal scrvices, employment and other agencies, launched the one day walk out.

The stoppage by the tower beefeaters, guardians of Britain's third most popular paying tourist attraction, forced authorities to close the home of the crown jewels.

Civil servants argue their job security and pay are being undermined by government so-called market testing, putting their jobs out to tender for competition from the private sector Organisers said it was the biggest such strike since 1981

"Our members have been betraved by this government, said CPSA General Secretary Barry Reas Bottom.

Civil Service Minister William Waldergrave on Thursday announced that the programme to tender or compare private sector and public sector work had yielded savings of 100 million pound (148 million US dollar) in services worth 700 million pound (1 billion dollar) over the past Yesterday he admitted the strike was biting, with as much as half the entire British civil service not at work.

" It is hitting some offices quite hard. Waldegrave said. But, he added, he could not allow the civil service to escape from the same cost pressures that forced private sector employees to economise and find new efficiencies.

" I have no right to take taxpayers money without meeting up to date efficiency standards, he said.

Russia to halt N-waste dumping in Japan by '94

HELSINKI, Nov 6: Russia will negotiate with the Japanese government before dumping more radioactive waste into the Sea of Japan and will halt the practice entirely next year, Russia's environment minister said Friday, reports

Japan and other Asian nations protested when a Russian military ship discharged about 237,000 gallons (900,000 liters) of radioactive liquid waste into the Sca of Japan on October 17.

"We had no alternative." Russian Environment Minister Viktor Danilov-Danilyan said at a news conference on Friday. "If we had not dumped the waste, it would have caused a very great environmental risk to the bay where the tanker was moored.

The nuclear waste was from a ship repair plant near the eastern Siberian port of Vladivostok. It was stored aboard a broken tanker, Danilov-Danilvan said.

Russia will treat future nuclear waste at reprocessing plants, to be built by next year in Murmansk, on the Kola Peninsula, and in Vladivostok, he said.

After that we will stop dumping into the sea. Untilthen we will negotiate with Japan about any such discharges," he said.

"The waste will not pose any kind of environmental hazard, but it definitely doesn't mean that the Russian Environment Ministry approves of this kind of activity," Danilov-Danilyan said.

Lima sells state shipping company

LIMA, Nov 6: The government on Friday sold off state shipping company, the second state interest privatised this week as part of an aggressive programme to shed some 80 state companies before 1995, reports AP.

Glennpoint Enterprises, Inc., whose main shareholder is Chilean company Ulteragas, bid 24.1 million dollar for Petrolera Transoceanica, SA's for tankers of 25,000 DWT each. The winning bid surpassed the 21.2 million dollar base price.

It was the second auction of Petrolera Transoceanica. The first one was called off in May after bidders failed to match the 25 million dollar asking price.

Glennpoint beat out Greek shipping firms Plumfield Shipping Corporation and Peru# West Coast Holding Ltd.

"This clearly shows Peru is a country worth investing in. Businesses are promising not only for national investors, but foreign ones as well," said Energy Minister Daniel Hokama. On Thursday, the government sold the Boltvian branch of state bank Banco Popular for 6.1 million dollar.

The sales are part of the government's plan to open up the economy to private investment and reduce a bloated state pay-

Later this month, the government plans to sell off paper and cement plants and copper mine Cerro Verde. Next month, the state will put up for sale its largest mining company, Centromin.

Brazil to delay foreign debt repayment

SAO PAULO, Brazil, Nov 6: Brazil's latest political scandal has forced another postponement in the repayment of part of this country's huge 120 billion dollar foreign debt, reports

Pedro Malan, President of the Central Bank, said late Thursday an agreement to repay 35 billion dollar to its private foreign creditors was now scheduled to be signed April 15 and not February 28. Previously, agreements were to have been signed June 30 and November 30 of this year.

He said Brazil must curb 35 per cent monthly inflation, slash its deficit and draw up a 1994 federal budget before it can get the go-ahead from the International Monetary Fund to conclude the debt repayment agreement

An IMF mission is scheduled to visit Brazil in coming weeks to gather information about Brazil's economy. It will be the third IMF team to visit Brazil this year.

The scandal which broke in mid-October involves more than 30 legislators and current and former government officials who allegedly manipulated the federal budget and took brides from construction firms favoured with government contracts.

While the stock market declined slightly Friday because of the debt-repayment delay, stock brokers said the debt announcement apparently had no effect on trading of Brazil's debt.

The government said the debt accord delay will not affect the scheduled signing of Brazil's external financing plan November 29 in Toronto.

Vietnam to strengthen ties with ex-Soviet states

HANOI. Nov 6 : Even as Vietnam seeks new friends overseas, it wants to shore up ties with the remnants of its former superpower patron, the Soviet Union, the Vietnamese foreign minister, said Friday, reports AP.

Vietnam has agreed to intensify economic cooperation with the Russian Federation and the Republics of Ukraine and Byelorussia, Nguyen Manh Cam told a news conference. after returning from a 10-day visit to the three newly independent countries.

Although we follow a multilateral, diversified, open foreign policy, we'll still pay due attention to the countries with which we have time-honoured, traditional relations, Cam said. "We'll still reserve them a very high place.

The Soviet Union served as Vietnam's main trading partner and political ally until collapsing in 1990. The ensuing withdrawal of Soviet financial support has forced Vietnam to accelerate its economic reforms and cultivate new markets for its goods in Asia and Western Europe.

"In terms of economics, we also pay due attention to the market with which we are familiar," Cam said.

Vietnam plans to strike new deals in the oil, gas and energy sectors with Russia, shipbuilding and coal mining with Ukraine, and farm machines and tropical foodstuffs with . Byelorussia, he said.

The foreign minister noted differences in the economic reform policies each nation has followed since communism. Russia, for example, has gone farther than its neighbours in privatising its state enterprises, he said.

But Cam declined to compare these policies, and their degree of success, with Vietnam's own strategy of renovation, known as "Doi Moj". "I think that the tempo as well as the scope of renovation of each country must depend on the specific conditions of each country," he said.
