S Korea rejects North's call for 'package deal'

SEOUL, Nov 12 : South Korea rejected today North Korea's call for a so-called "package deal" to settle the crisis over Pyongyang's alleged nuclear weapons programme urging the North to accept outside inspections first, reports AFP.

" Even before we discuss or consider the so-called package deal, there are obstacles we have to deal with in order to get to the point," Foreign Minister Han Seung-Joo told journalists.

He said the North should first allow nuclear inspections by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and agree to resume dialogue with South Korea to clear fears that it was developing weapons.

Thai govt survives no-confidence

BANGKOK, Nov 12: Prime Minister Chuan Leekpai's government won a no-confidence vote Friday after a debate in which opposition parties accused two ministers of abuse of authority, nepotism, lying and having a meddle some wife, reports AP.

Legislators voted 191 to 164 against the censure motion directed at Interior Minister Chavalit Yongchaiyudh, and 191 to 167 against the motion directed at Commerce Minister Uthai Pimchaichon. A simple majority of the 360-member House of Representatives determines the outcome.

Chuan's five-party coalition holds only 193 seats in the Parliament but was widely expected to win the vote that followed two days of debate.

Chuan's year-old government is riding a crest of strong economic growth, and the stock market's main index on Friday reached another in its recent series of record highs.

600-year-old silver spoon fetches $ 35,460

LONDON: A 600-year-old silver spoon found in the thatched roof of a Devon farmhouse fetched 24,000 pounds (35,460 dollars) at auction on Thursday, less than was expected, reports

The six-inch (15 cm) long spoon, made in 1380, was discovered by a workman repairing the roof of the mediaeval farmhouse in Bridford, southwest England, in 1982.

It was subsequently sold and its private owner offered it for sale at Stoheby's Auctioneers, where it was bought by an unidentified private collector for less than its 30,000 pounds (44,300 dollars) estimate.

The spoon was encased in tar and hidden in the depths of the rafters. Experts say it was secreted early in its life for safety, quite a common practice with valuables at the time.

Alcohol doesn't kill nerve cells in brain

LONDON: Contrary to popular belief, a new Danish study shows chronic drinking does not kill nerve cells in the brain. It just disconnects them, reports AP.

The findings, based on detailed examinations of the brains of alcoholics who died, suggest it may be easier than previously thought to restore brain function damaged by heavy drinking.

Dead nerve cells do not regenerate and are not replaced in the brain, but the fibers that link them will sometimes regrow after being damaged.

"It gives some hope in the sense that it might be possible to restore at least some function" of the brain, Dr. Bente Pakkenberg, one of the investigators, said Thursday. She is director of the Neurological Research Laboratory at the Bartholin Institute in Copenhagen, Denmark.

The Danish scientists compared the brains of 11 male severe alcoholics who died to those of 11 dead men who were not alcoholics. The drinkers included men who abused alcohol for years and suffered from drinking-related diseases like cirrhosis of the liver, inflammation of the pancreas or swollen blood vessels surrounding the esophagus.

Pakkenberg said her team used a sophisticated technique to count precisely the number of nerve cells in tissue-thin slices of the neocortex, the outermost region of the brain.

Soya beans help protect prostate cancer

LONDON, Nov 12: Soya beans could help protect men from the risk of prostate cancer, researchers said in an article published today, reports Reuter.

Professor Herman Adlercreutz and a team from Helsinki University investigated why prostate cancer is much lower in Japan and some other Asian countries than in western nations.

They measured levels of natural chemicals called soflavonoids in the plasma of two groups of Japanese and Finnish men.

A study of the eating habits of 14 healthy Japanese men and a parallel group in Finland found that soflavonoids, which have oestrogen- like properties, could inhibit prostate cancer cell growth at a critical phase. Soya, which is heavily consumed in Japan but not usual in the Finnish diet, contains soflavonoids as well as being a rich source of protein fat and B vitamins.

Jakarta needs 30 tonnes uranium per year

JAKARTA, Nov 12: Indonesia the country preferred to import needs some 20 to 30 tonnes of uranium per year for its first nuclear plant and some countries have offered to supply the materials, a news report said Thursday, reports AFP.

*For the operation of a nuclear power plant of Muria which has the capacity of 600 megawatts, some 20 to 30 tonnes of uranium are needed per year," the director of the National Atomic Agency (Batan) Jaal Ahimsa said.

"While for natural uranium which would be used for support, some 120 tonnes of uranium needed per year, he said.

Ahimsa, as quoted by the economic daily Bisnis Indonesia, said some countries including Australia, Canada, the United States, Russia and some in southern Africa have expressed an interest in supplying the urantum.

He said although Indonesia mined uranium in Kalimantan rather than to explore as exploration costs were expensive. Indonesian authorities are planning to build a 600megawatt nuclear power plant near the Muria mountain at the northern coast of densely populated central Java. Ahimsa said the tender for the construction of the nuclear plant would be opened by midnext year while a feasibility and site study will be completed last this year.

The 15 million dollar feasibility and site studies was jointly conducted by Batan, the national development planning board, the Science and Technology Agency and Newject, a Japanese consultant, industry sources have said.

Ahimsa said there are three reactor systems offered by three foreign consortium which would join the tender, including pres-

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti Nov 12: The army has threatened to imprison the defense minister of the civilian transition government for criticizing military chief Raoul Cedras, reports AP.

The threat to retired Brig Gen Jean Beliotte was made in a letter from army chief of staff Brig Gen Phillipe Biamby that was broadcast Thursday by private Radio Tropic FN.

Russia against hasty expansion of NATO toward East MOSCOW, Nov 12: The Russian army warned Thursday that membership of NATO for East European countries could undermine East-West disarmament accords and would run against Russia's national interests at present, reports AFP.

"Russia sees no possible benefit from a hasty expansion of NATO towards the East," the armed forces daily Krasnaya Zvezda said in a commentary.

"For the moment NATO respects Moscow's views," the daily said.

The paper, which reflects thinking within the Defence Ministry, questioned whether a "selective extension" of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) would lead to "a violation or, more exactly, the collapse" of current conventional disarmament accords.

"The party that exists in these accords would no longer exist" if the alliance were enlarged to include countries in eastern Europe which formerly belonged to the Soviet-dominated Warsaw Pact security

The commentary stressed that in addition to security concerns expansion of the alliance would affect Russia's political and psychological interests.

For this reason, and contrary to perceptions in western security circles, the Russian military did not have a "particular role" in forming Moscow's policy vis-a-vis NATO.

"Russia agrees that this union, like other regional organisations, could be transform in the new conditions, but why should the decisions be hasty?"

was not demanding a right to veto new applications for membership in NATO but had the "full right" to make "decisive assessments and statements" in this regard.

Separately, Russia's ambassador to Belgium and representative at NATO, Nikolai Afanaskyevsky, admitted that Moscow had a "double" approach on policy towards expansion of the alliance.

We recognise the sovereign right of each state to resolve itself how to guarantee its own security, to join or not to join [defence] unions," Afanaskyevsky said in an interview with the liberal newspaper Sevodnia.

On he other hand, the creation or retention of new local The commentary said Russia. zones of security, the launching of new coalitions, contradicts the goal of building a stable European state," he added.

Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev said earlier this week that Moscow would oppose enlargement of NATO if it did not also include granting full membership to Russia.

Russia however has voiced backing for a US plan for the gradual expansion of the alliance to former east bloc countries including Russia through limited initial joint training and exercises.

AP from London adds : As 70 nations prepared to vote on a total ban on nuclear dumping, Russia said Wednesday it could not stop discharging low-level

The issue of nuclear dumping made headlines last month when the Greenpeace environmental group caught a Russian military ship discharging 237,000 gallons (897,000 litres) of low-level liquid nuclear waste into the Sea of Japan.

Russia's Environment Minister Viktor Danilov-Danilyan told a news conference Wednesday that Russia can stop dumping low-level waste into the sea by 1996 - but if it gets enough international help to build storage facilities it could halt the practice by the end of 1994.

Remi Parmentier, Greenpeace International's expert on nuclear dumping, said the environmental group is "very optimistic" that delegates wil approve a legally binding total prohibition. A two-thirds majority of member states that cast votes is needed to approve the amendment.

"We would vote in favour," Danilov-Danilyan said, "provided that (there is) some period of time for Russia in order to give her a chance to create the (storage) facilities.
