BEIJING. Nov 20: A fire that swept through a toy factory killed 81 workers and injured 36 others, most of them women who couldn't flee because doors and windows were locked, an official newspaper said Saturday, reports AP.

The fire Friday raced through the first two floors of the three-story Zhili Handicraft Factory in Kuiyong, an industrial zone in the southern boomtown of Shenzhen near the border with Hong Kong.

The Shenzhen government said the factory was a joint venture with Hong Kong, but refused to identify the Hong Kong partner.

"Because of the factory's sealed way of operating, corridors were narrow and the doors were locked, the workers couldn't evacuate in time. China's Communist Party newspaper, the People's Daily (Renmin Ribao), said in a threeinch-long fourth-page article.

Most of the casualties were burned, suffocated or crushed to death in the hallways and stairwells as they fled the blaze, according to the Ta Kong Pao, a Hong Kong newspaper funded by China.

It said more than 10 people jumped from windows of an adjoining building to escape.

The Wen Wei Po, another Hong Kong newspaper funded by China, said the factory managers had locked windows and toy factory fire covered them with steel bars to guard against theft. It said fire authorities sent the factory a notice in March ordering it to make changes.-

> Ta Kung Pao said about 240 workers were in the factory when the fire broke out at about 1:40 pm (0540 gmt) in the area of the first-floor generator room It said several workers tried to put it out with fire extinguishers but the blaze quickly engulfed boxes of dolls and raw materials, including cotton

Wei Wei Po said 79 of the 81 workers who died were women. Most were from elsewhere in China, part of the new army of rural workers who have flocked to coastal regions in search of higher incomes.

"The issue of resettlement has now turn out to be the decisive issue for Japan," Rahman said. "The Japanese government wants to see if the evicted people from the proposed bridge site were properly and adequately compensated."

"We told the Japanese counterpart that our compensation amount has been increased from 16 million US dollars to 46 million dollars which is more than adequate," the minister told the newsmen.

"We also told them that if need be, we will further increase the amount, but the project cannot stall because of this issue." The project should go on alongside the rehabilitation

"We also sought Japanese assistance in building a number of bridges-the Bhairab bridge, the Dhaleswari bridge and the Kushiara bridge."

From Staff Correspondent CHITTAGONG, Nov 20: The body of a 50-year-old woman named Sura Khatun was recovered today from the Karnaphuli river, raising the known death toll in Friday's boat capsize here to six, police and port offictals said.

Earlier, the death figure was recorded at five, including two women and two children when an overcrowded passenger boat capsized after being hit by a fishing trawler Friday morning near Mooring No 5 in the Kharnaphuli river.

Meanwhile, the sunken boat was retrieved by the Chittagong Port Authority's salvage vessels this afternoon after several attempts since last night.

Port officials said the salvage operation was delayed due to the strong current in the river.

A case was filed with the Port thana today against the driver of the engine boat. But police could not yet trace the fishing trawler
