Lyall doesn't want it either

LONDON, Nov 27: Ipswich manager John Lyall became the latest man to rule himself out of the running for the job of England soccer's caretaker manager following Graham Taylor's resignation on Tuesday. reports Reuter.

"There's no benefit in giving it to me ... my priority remains with my club." Lyall said on

The football association (FA) are looking for a temporary manager for England's friendlies against Denmark in March and against Germany the following month.

Lyall, 53, said in a statement: "In view of the speculation I believe that it is important to clarify the situation.

My future in football management can only be short term because of my age. I would do anything to help English football but I do not feel myself being appointed caretaker manager would be of benefit to the game.

FA chairman Sir Bert Millichip has said he wants a caretaker manager to bridge gap before a successor to Graham Taylor is found.

Other suggested managers including Don Howe and Steve Coppell have also ruled themselves out.

Zimbabwe, a bad loser

HARARE, Nov 27: Soccer's governing body ruled Zimbabwe a bad loser in its World Cup qualifying round and banned the coach from training any soccer team for a year, local sports officials said Saturday. reports AP.

UEFA plans for major changes

BERN, Nov 27: UEFA. European soccer's governing body, may make its elite club competition even more exclusive by denying national champions an automatic berth, a spokesman said Wednesday, reports AP.

UEFA's executive committee next week will consider admitting only 16 teams to the European Champions' Cup. based on recent club performance, UEFA spokesman Andre Vieli said. All national champions currently can enter the tournament. After preliminary rounds, the last eight play in two groups of four. Each group winners face the other pool's runners-up in semifinal to determine the two finalists. A proliferation of weak teams from the former Soviet Union, former Yugoslavia and elsewhere, combined with pressure from Western European clubs for more top-draw matches, has increasingly forced UEFA to seek changes to strengthen its top tournament. The proposal for the Dec 1-2
