

Training workshop

A three-day training workshop on the pilot programme to improve management of the flood control drainage and irrigation projects began in the capital yesterday, reports UNB.

Inaugurating the workshop, State Minister for Irrigation and Flood Control Mosharraf Hossain Shahjahan said the economy of Bangladesh is dominated by agriculture which is dependent on water.

But, he pointed out, too much of water during monsoon causes widespread flooding and restricts crop production in the country.

On the other hand, the state minister said, scarcity of water during the dry season leads to serious disruption in the agricultural sector.
