

Dhaka Day by Day

Cassette Culture on the Offensive

by Raffat Binte Rashid

Choli ka piche kaya hai, fireya dayo amar prem... these are the two most hit Hindi and Bangla songs this season. Every young, old, or middle-aged are heard humming these tunes, even absent minded.

In fact, it is so much popular with young men and women that even in the ongoing book fair, which is to uphold the spirit of our language movement, these songs are played and that too in a high-pitched volume.

Actually there is nothing wrong with playing these sort of songs in the book fair. At least there are no hard and fast rule that this or that should be played specifically within this boundary. But one might wonder and try to establish a common thing between songs played here and the Ekushey Book Fair.

As they say, there are a proper time and place for every thing. These modern songs with Western music and dance beats are for all melas (fairs) except bot mela (book fair).

The Ekushey book fair has its own colour and music. It is already rich and hardly needs any other music to amplify its own richness or attraction for that purpose.

Bands are quite a craze with the young generation these days. If any five or four boys together have a keyboard, guitar and a drum set they qualify to be a band and with bizarre names such as 'Sunday Train' or '7o'clock'. Actually what's in a name!

To meet this demand of the younger people, who make the bulk of the visitors in the fair, there are cassette stalls on the pavement along with the food and other stalls.

"There are approximately 80 to 100 cassette stalls only," thinks Iqbal, a cassette salesman of Jim Enterprise. These small stalls, outside the Bangla Academy, venue of the fair, and on the side walks are set up with business motives purely. And not surprisingly the cassette shops are full of all Hindi top ten or chamak, a new album of four popular bands LRB, Chime, Obscure and Crossroads, Alamgir, Shurva Dev, Madonna or Micheal Jackson — just ask for any on the hit list and they have it. "Azam Khan's cassette is quite in demand among the customers now," says Iqbal.

This side of the fair shows no spirit of Ekushey, rather it displays pure business and financial motives.

There are few stores which are playing recitation of poems, but with full volume Hindi and band, songs around, these top volume recitation makes a cacophony of treacherous noises. The noise is making the whole fair quite irritating, you cannot even talk to the sales person because of the chaos, not to mention the noise pollution it is creating.

Tomake chole, kathopokathan, pidim jalo premer are few best sellers in the recitation section.

Shimul Mustafa, son of famous actor Golam Mustafa has created another kind of sensation in the cassette business at the fair. "So far 120 cassettes (approximately) of Shimul Mustafa has been sold only from my store," reports Iqbal. However, he feels that more is being sold in big stores which has loud speakers and are well decorated. Then again some feel that many cassettes are sold merely on good name. Oh! it is his cassette that give me one sort of business, says one salesman who sells only cassettes of their own organisation and is trying hard to promote other's recitation too.

The names of the stores are quite amusing (or not so amusing). Jane Maren Na (Don't kill me) is a cassette store selling all these new introductions of the music world. (Even though the shopowner doesn't know what the name is supposed to signify.)

These naming or nomenclature of the shops are just another story all together. One might call it the new vogue of the fair.

However these do, somehow add colour to the fair as well. There is definitely the good side of all these but somehow they all seem lost in the chaos and confusion, not to forget the crowd. They claim to be promoting Bengali culture. Like it or not the Bangladeshers are in a new mood to redefine their culture. There is an ample manifestation of this. The craze for band music may be an indication.

JOB OPPORTUNITY

Could you manage a programme supporting disabled people?

Programme Manager

Tk 17,000-19,000 per month plus other benefits

- * Are you a disabled person?
- * Do you have programme management experiences/abilities?

If so, you may be the person we are looking for.

Action on Disability and Development (ADD) is an international organisation which promotes projects and initiatives which are run by disabled people in their own communities.

We now wish to appoint a Programme Manager in Bangladesh to lead a small team of people. Often ADD staff are disabled people and we provide further training if necessary.

The overall aim of the Programme is to establish a sustainable programme in Bangladesh to serve disabled people both adults and children. The appointee will be a Manager with demonstrable experience in management of people. They will need to be good at working with people since ADD regards relations with organisations of disabled people, parents' associations, the Government and NGO's, as being crucial to the success of the programme.

ADD welcomes applications from both men and women who have the appropriate qualifications. Disabled people with the appropriate qualifications are particularly encouraged to apply. Please indicate if you are a disabled person and your disability.

Applications should be submitted along with:

- * a copy of your CV
- * a short statement in English in your own handwriting of not more than 500 words explaining what you think about the main problems for disabled people in Bangladesh.

Applications must be received by March 2, 1994 to the ADD Consultant, GPO Box 568, Dhaka-1000. S-81
