

Khasbulatov accuses Yeltsin of staging coup in Oct '93

MOSCOW, Mar 1: Former Russian Parliament Chairman Ruslan Khasbulatov, unbowed by more than four months in jail, proclaimed his innocence in last October's bloody power struggle and accused President

Ruslan Khasbulatov Boris Yeltsin of staging a coup, reports Reuter.

In an interview published in the right-wing newspaper Sovetskaya Rossiya Today, Khasbulatov confirmed that he planned to quit politics and devote himself to science and to writing a book.

In his first public comments since being freed by a parliamentary amnesty on Saturday, Khasbulatov said that the former parliament, the Supreme Soviet, had made mistakes, but insisted it had acted legitimately.

"Remember, the President had staged a coup d'état," he said. "What was the Supreme Soviet to do? It was to act in full accordance with the existing constitution. And that is what its leadership did."

Khasbulatov, in jail since Yeltsin won a bloody power struggle in Moscow on October 3 and 4, cast doubt on the validity of the new Russian constitution, narrowly approved in a referendum on December 12. "The constitution so furiously rejected by Yeltsin is a whole lot better and more democratic than its successor," he told Sovetskaya Rossiya.

At least 147 people were killed in two days of clashes, the culmination of a year of dispute between the Yeltsin and the Supreme Soviet over which was the top power in the land.

Yeltsin sent in tanks and shelled the former parliament building, the White House, after Khasbulatov and the then Vice-President Alexander Rutskoi called on their supporters to storm the Moscow television centre and the Kremlin.

Masako's father made Japan's envoy to UN

TOKYO, Mar 1: The father of Crown Princess Masako was formally named Tuesday as Japan's ambassador to the United Nations, reports AP.

The appointment of Hisashi Owada, 61, had been expected since last year. Owada's appointment is effective Thursday, though he will arrive in New York later, said a Foreign Ministry official.

Owada succeeds Yoshio Hatano, 62, who had held the post for four years. Owada stepped down from the Foreign Ministry's top career post of administrative vice minister last August, two months after his daughter married Crown Prince Naruhito.

Since then, Owada has been an adviser to the ministry.

PLO rejects major Israeli package of concessions

JERUSALEM, Mar 1: The PLO rejected major Israeli concessions aimed at coaxing them back to peace talks in the wake of the mosque massacre, saying early Tuesday the package did not go far enough in protecting Palestinians in the occupied lands, reports AP.

The major stumbling block was an offer announced hours earlier by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin to allow unarmed international observers in the occupied territories.

"We still insist on military and armed peacekeeping forces to protect our people," PLO Executive Committee member Ali Ishak said in Tunis, Tunisia, after the committee rejected the offer early Tuesday. "What has been proposed is insufficient."

Israel also offered to disarm settlers in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho and expand the proposed Palestinian police force in those areas, according to PLO officials meeting in Tunis.

Rabin made the offer for international observers in Jerusalem Monday. Later, spokesmen for the Prime Minister and the Israeli Foreign Ministry said they had no information on a package of concessions, although they did not deny that one existed.

Such a package would mean that Israel had agreed to most demands put by the PLO following Friday's shooting of worshippers at a mosque in Hebron.

Two Palestinians were killed Monday in clashes with soldiers in the occupied territories, bringing the Arab death toll to 64 since a Jewish gunman opened fire at the Muslims, killing 39 men and boys.

In New York, diplomats from the United States, Russia, the PLO and Egypt said they were close to agreeing on a U.N. resolution condemning the massacre. Israel began cracking down on Jewish extremists Sunday and announced plans to release up to 1,000 Palestinian prisoners in the wake of the attack, which badly hurt the already faltering Middle East peace process.

But PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat said those measures were not enough. He demanded all Jewish settlements be removed from the West Bank and Gaza.

The PLO also has demanded armed foreign troops in the territories — a step Rabin says would compromise Israel's control there — as well as the disarming of settlers and an expanded police force.

Mideast peace talks in Washington were suspended Sunday after Syria, Lebanon and Jordan walked out in support of the Palestinian Liberation Organisation.

In a speech Monday to Israel's parliament, Rabin entreated the PLO to be less adamant.

General Kazuo Aichi told a press conference a meeting could take place when US Secretary of State Warren Christopher visits Japan on March 9-11.

US under-secretary of defence Frank Wisner, accompanying Christopher, would also attend the meeting, he said.

Japan would be represented by Aichi and Foreign Minister Tsutomu Hata, Japanese officials said.

US to back Major in row over reforms in HK

WASHINGTON, Mar 1: British Prime Minister John Major won US support Monday in London's row with Beijing over democratic reforms in Hong Kong, British officials said, reports Reuter.

China reacted furiously last week to the approval by Hong Kong's legislature of the first stage of the reforms. It said Britain had slammed the door shut on any chance of resuming talks on how the colony should be ruled once Britain has handed it over to China in 1997.

Major, on a two-day US visit, told Vice-President Al Gore it would help if the United States kept making plain its support for more democracy in the colony, officials said. Gore, who said he was a great admirer of British Hong Kong Governor Chris Patten, said Washington would do just that, they added.

In an interview with Cable News Network, Major expressed confidence that the row with China could be overcome.

"These discussions aren't always easy," Major said. "But they are progressing."

John Russell, a Justice Department spokesman, said Monday that more than one government witness was scheduled to present "fairly colourful" testimony Tuesday supporting the government's contention that the Ameses, if allowed out on bail, would be an unacceptable risk to flee the country.

In court papers filed Monday in response to the requests for bail, the prosecutors said newly uncovered evidence "suggests that their 'ill-gotten gains' are substantially greater and raise their take to well over 2.5 million dollars," the Post reported.

Mother offers to sell unborn child for $20,000

CLINTWOOD: On her 19th birthday, a woman pleaded guilty Monday to offering to sell her unborn child for 20,000 dollars. She showed no emotion when a judge gave her a suspended 12-month jail sentence, reports AP.

Stephanie Gail Owens admitted in a plea agreement that she and her husband, James, agreed to sell either the boy due to be born in a month for 20,000 dollars or their infant daughter for 25,000 dollars.

The couple placed a newspaper advertisement in December 1992 offering a baby for adoption. In a letter to his father, Owens said they were selling everything to move from this poor coal-mining area in central Appalachia to Alabama.

Whitney Houston nominated for 4 Grammy Awards

UNDATED: Whitney Houston says she isn't banking on winning all four Grammy Awards she's nominated for but if she makes a clean sweep, she could earn a big payoff, reports AP.

Eric Clapton, Natalie Cole and Bonnie Raitt have all cashed in with big Grammy Award nights.

"A lot of people are saying to me, 'Oh, Whitney, you got it in the bag,'" she told TV Guide recently. "But I'm like, hey, I'm just going to wait and see what happens. I don't build myself up for the big letdown."

The 36th annual ceremony will be held at 0100 GMT Wednesday at New York City's Radio City Music Hall.

Miss Houston has the chance to make it an even dozen trophies in a month at Tuesday's recording industry awards show.

ROK, DPRK to reopen border talks tomorrow

SEOUL, Mar 1: North Korea has agreed to hold a border meeting to discuss an exchange of presidential envoys with South Korea on Thursday, a spokesman of the National Unification Board (NUB) said here today, reports AFP.

The spokesman said the North had agreed that the meeting on Thursday could be held on the southern side of the truce village of Panmunjom, as proposed Monday by Seoul.

"We propose to have the fourth working-level contact for the exchange of special envoys at the peace house on the southern side of Panmunjom at 10 O'clock on the 3rd of March," the spokesman quoted the North Korean message as saying.

The response to the South Korean proposal, replayed by hot line at Panmunjom, came as an inspection team from the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) was scheduled to arrive in the North Korean capital of Pyongyang from Beijing.

The IAEA team is to resume inspections of the North's seven declared nuclear sites after a year-long gap, during which Pyongyang threatened to pull out of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, raising fears it was developing an atomic bomb.

The NUB spokesman said South Korea was to have announced the cancellation of joint US-South Korean 'team spirit' military maneuvers Tuesday afternoon.

"But, because of the delay by North Korea in replying to the South's invitation Monday to hold border talks, the announcement will also be delayed until the (Thursday's) border talks are held," the spokesman said.

Seoul had on Monday proposed that the meeting on the exchange of envoys be held early today, the day the IAEA inspectors arrived in Pyongyang.

Resolution of the nuclear impasse, and the holding of a third round of high-level talks between Washington and Pyongyang are tied to the North allowing the IAEA inspections and exchange of envoys with the South.

The report, monitored in Tokyo, said the two had an amicable conversation and that the North Korean leader arranged a dinner for Ho.

Officials of Ho's organisation, the General Association of Korean Residents in Japan, were not immediately available to comment on the report.

Blast claims one in Brussels: One person was killed and seven injured by an explosion in the early hours of Tuesday that wrecked the top floors of an eight-storey apartment block in northeast Brussels, the Belgian news agency reported. Reuter says from Brussels.

The cause of the explosion in the building in the Berchem Saint-Augustin area of the city was not immediately known, but a photographer on the scene said rescue services believed it was due to a gas leak.

He said a number of people were still trapped in the building, the top four floors of which had collapsed.

They chose Monday because that was the day that Prime Minister P V Narasimha Rao presented his new budget to Parliament.

Quake kills one in Iran: An earthquake shook southern Iran on Tuesday, killing at least one person and injuring 21, Tehran radio reported. AP reports from Nicosia.

The radio, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp, said the earthquake registered 5.7 on the open-ended Richter scale. It was centered 435 miles (700 kms) south of Tehran in Fars province.

The earthquake at 7:38 am (0408 GMT) was the latest in a series of moderate quakes that have jolted the region in the past week.

The Richter scale is a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake, as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph.

De Klerk asks rightists to avoid bloodshed

CAPE TOWN, Mar 1: President F W de Klerk opened what was almost certainly the final session of South Africa's white parliament on Monday appealing to rightists to avoid bloodshed and secession, reports Reuter.

"There is simply no future on the road of unconstitutional and violent activity. I appeal to any of those who might be considering this road to turn back before it is too late," he said.

De Klerk told legislators in the parliament, which excludes the country's black majority.

Diplomatic retaliation over spy case appears to have ended

WASHINGTON, Mar 1: Tit-for-tat diplomatic retaliation, by Washington and Moscow over the Aldrich H Ames spy case appears to have ended, and the US government is to spell out in court the charges against Ames and his wife, reports AP.

Russia announced Monday it was expelling a US official, whom it identified as James L. Morris, in response to President Clinton's decision last week to kick out of the United States the official believed to be the Russian foreign intelligence station chief in Washington.

The CIA and the State Department declined to comment on Morris' role, but government officials speaking privately said he is the CIA station chief in Moscow. State Department spokesman Michael McCurry initially declined to confirm that Morris was the expelled US Embassy officer; later when told that Russian news media had said it was Morris, McCurry said, "I don't have any reason to dispute that."

The expulsions are part of the fallout from the arrest last week of Ames and his wife, Rosario Ames, on charges of spying for Russia. The Ameses are accused of selling some of America's most sensitive secrets to Moscow for 1.5 million dollars.

The Washington Post, quoting court papers filed by federal prosecutors, reported in Tuesday's editions that the Ameses were paid at least 2.5 million dollars. Dee Dee Myers, the White House press secretary, said a further round of retaliation was not expected.

"We do not expect to take any more diplomatic action," she said, adding, however, that the United States reserved the right to move against any Russians in the United States who might be implicated later in the Ames case.

Vice President Al Gore did not explicitly rule out further diplomatic moves of Russia, but he stressed a desire to ease the strains arising from the arrests of the Ameses.

The impact of the allegations against the CIA employees should be put in a larger perspective, and the relationship between the United States and Russia should not be determined by such an incident," he said. "We have our own self-interest in continuing the improvement of relations with Russia, and we will seek that."

Ames through his court-appointed lawyer has said he will fight the US charges against him. The attorney for his Colombian-born wife, who is a former CIA informant, has criticised the government's case but not explicitly denied the charges.

The Ameses are scheduled to appear before US Magistrate Barry H Poretz in suburban Alexandria, Va, on Tuesday at a hearing to determine whether they will continue to be held without bail and whether the case will be sent to a grand jury.

Russia supports downing of 4 Serb planes over Bosnia

MOSCOW, Mar 1: Russia supported NATO's action in shooting down four planes on a bombing raid over Bosnia on Monday but did not join the western alliance in blaming Bosnian Serbs for the incident, reports Reuter.

A Foreign Ministry statement, Moscow's first official reaction, said the identity of the warplanes was not known and that the Bosnian Serb high command had denied responsibility.

"Whoever carried out the military sortie over Bosnia in violation of the corresponding UN Security Council resolutions on a no-fly zone, it is they who bear full responsibility for what happened," it said, according to Itar-Tass news agency.

NATO says the four planes were Serb and that it struck after they had carried out a bombing raid on Muslim-held territory.

Western governments are keenly watching Moscow, following its change of tack over the past two weeks to present itself as defender of the Serbs, Russia's historical allies.

Bosnians Serb leader

Radovan Karadzic arrived in Moscow on Monday evening for talks with Russian officials.

The Kremlin sharply criticised NATO's threat to bomb Bosnian Serb artillery positions around Sarajevo earlier this month, an issue which opened a rift between Moscow and the West.

An Adviser to President Boris Yeltsin, Andranik Migranyan, also reacted critically on hearing first reports of Monday's incident, saying they were meant as a demonstration to Russia.

Alija fears Serb assault on Maglaj

SARAJEVO, Mar 1: Serb forces may launch a final assault on the besieged Bosnian town of Maglaj while the world's attention is distracted by truces elsewhere in Bosnia and NATO attacks on Serb planes, the Bosnian president warned on Monday, reports Reuter.

Alija Izetbegovic said it was possible the town could fall.

"The attention of the international community has been diverted from a city exposed for days to brutal attacks by the Serbs," Izetbegovic told a news conference in Sarajevo.

Little attention has been paid to Maglaj as news has focused on NATO warplanes which shot down four Serb jets returning from a bombing raid on Muslim arms facilities on Monday, and troubled cease-fires in Sarajevo and central Bosnia.

Journalists and UN personnel are blocked from reaching the enclave by besieging Serb forces and partly Croat troops.

The city of Maglaj, 9 kms north of Sarajevo, was cut off from the rest of Muslim-led Bosnian government territory in the centre of the country by a joint Serb and Bosnian Croat attack in June 1992.
