Drought situation prevailing in Chandpur, farming hampered

From Our Correspondent

CHANDPUR, Mar 29: The drought situation has aggravated in all the seven thanas of the district as hot spell is continuing.

Most of the rivers, canals, ponds and other water bodies have dried up and underground water level has registered a fall.

Deep tubewells, shallow tubewells and hand-driven tubewells can not work properly. About 25 per cent tubewells have gone out of order and 15 per cent are on the way to stop for the fall of water level causing damage to standing IRRI, boro crops.

According to agricultural office sources, the cultivation target was fixed at two lakh acres of land but only one lakh twenty thousand acres have been brought under cultivation due to drought and fall of water level.

Jute cultivation target was fixed at forty thousand acres of land but jute has already been cultivated on fifteen thousand acres of land.

So, a vast tract of land prepared for cultivation of IRRI, boro and jute has been lying fallow for want of rain.

The sowing of aus and jute seeds has not yet been possible due to continued drought.

Standing robi crops on a vast area have completely been damaged due to drought. In fact there is no work in the agricultural fields.

As a result, the prices of essential commodities have gone up. Due to drought, people of the area have started selling their land, cattle and other belongings to meet the regular expenses.

Another report says: Chandpur Fisheries Research Institute has started cultivation of 'Thai pangas'.

Thai pangas is generally produced in rivers. Now it can be cultivated in ponds and canals in rural areas.

After a long research, the Fisheries Institute has become successful in cultivation of the fish fry in ponds at a large scale.

It is reported, some five hundred fry of pangas were brought here from Thailand in 1990. They were reared and cultured in the ponds of Chandpur Fishery Institute for three years.

The growth of fish fry was found to be very rapid and these attained maturity within three years of rearing. The researcher evolved 'Induced Breeding Technique'.

Through this technique, they can produce four lakh fish fry annually. They have distributed these fish fry among the fishermen for cultivation in the rural areas.

The fishermen have also become successful in cultivating these pangas in ponds. This is a remarkable achievement in the fish research in Bangladesh. The scientific name of this pangas fish is 'Pangasius Sutchi'.

Thai pangas can be of 10 to 16 kg in weight. While the local pangas can not be cultivated in ponds, the Thai ones can be cultivated in ditches, haors, beels and jheels.

It is commercially viable and technically feasible in our country. This new breed of pangas is growing rapidly in different ponds of Chandpur and can easily be cultivated in adverse situation. It can be easily cultivated along with other species of fish as it does not hunt any other fish.

Chandpur Fisheries Research Institute has undertaken a scheme to cultivate Thai pangas in large quantity from this year.

Mosquito menace makes life miserable

BRAHMANBARIA, Mar 29: Mosquito menace has assumed an alarming proportion in the district almost paralysing the civic life, reports UNB.

Soon after the sundown the mosquitoes in swarms come from bushes, drains, kutcha latrines, derelict ponds filled with water hyacinths and cow sheds and invade the inmates of the houses making the life miserable.

The situation is unbearable in rural areas where the poor men sleep without mosquito nets. They cannot even afford to buy mosquito coils due to poverty.

The domestic animals become restless with the sharp stinging of mosquitoes throughout the whole night.

Mentionable that a section of people taking advantage of the situation enhanced the prices of mosquito coils, Aerosol and Finish which are beyond the purchasing capacity of the common people.

Meanwhile, many people have been attacked by malaria due to mosquito bite.

According to local people, aerial and ground spray of DDT may ease the situation.

They urged the concerned authorities to take immediate steps to combat the mosquito menace.

Another report says: A man was killed and four others were injured in a clash between two rival groups over holding of football match at Paikpara in Sadar thana, police said on Monday.

According to witnesses, the clash ensued on March 20 when one group opposed the holding of the match at the Paikpara playground in which one Harun Miah (25) was killed on the spot.

Two of the injured were rushed to the Sadar hospital while others were released after first aid. The body was sent to morgue for autopsy and a case has been filed with the police.
