A Consuming Passion Called Angling

by Raffat Binte Rashid

A consuming passion

Office work really comes in the way and bother when you have other, much more important things to do. Like going out on a fishing or hunting trip with friends. And this is exactly now Abdul Rashid a government office employee feels now a days.

Angling is his passion, which has been in his blood for generation, and now the Dhamond Lake being open once again to anglers, he finds it hard to concentrate on office work. He manipulatively looks for ways out and tries to keep his boss happy for a "ok you can go now," permission.

"12:00" clock in the afternoon is always the peak time in the office yet I always found out ways and will find ways to come here," he says grinning thanking his grey materials and of course his stars.

In this city where life is somewhat the easier version of being a robot, such competitions of rather charges are pleasant surprises. "Naturally our enthusiasm is high even a Raj Mistri (construction worker) finds his time to come here and have fun," Rashid explains.

The lake remains close to anglers for three months and the rest nine months are their. The season ticket is Tk. 1200 which is valid for nine months, all through. But for a general competition in which people from all over Bangladesh participate, the ticket is Tk.1000 for a single day.

Competition is also held for members only on the Balshakh 1 every year along with a picnic for which another Tk. 300 plus Tk 1000 is paid.

"This is really fun for me and even though I have to spend Tk 50 every day I fit here for fishings but money really doesn't matter when I see, the silver shine in the water," says Anwar Hossain a construction worker. So far he caught two katalas (buffalo fish) each weighing one and half kg on the average.

"I took my catch home and enjoyed a good meal, I seldom sell my catches," Hossain says. There are approximately 80 seats in the lake where minimum two and maximum four anglers can sit.

These seats or platforms made of wood and bamboo are built by the anglers themselves. Only the area is allotted by the Fishery Department and Shoukhin Samity. This samity has been legally registered at the lake premises in 1979 but is working since the Pakistan time.

Abdul Miah it's chairman has been angling here for the last 30 years. "We even caught buffalo fish weighing one maund and five seers and carp 33 kg, those were the days, Abdul Miah says with a sigh.

"Last year we cost over 10 to 15 lakh taka worth of fish from this lake but this year for the dam in Pantho Path we are able to catch atleast some," he explains. Every year the Fisheries Department releases atleast 40,000 to 50,000 fish fries into this lake, but because of the dirty sewerage water their growth is hampered and majority of them die.

"The anglers' only appeal to the authority concerned is to clean up the lake and allow enough oxygen in it for the fishes to survive," says Rashid.

It is not only the oxygen, which they scantily gets now, the fishes are every day led with a char (fish food). Herbs like Ankagi, Gurbo, even Methi, decayed leafs, kakoli a kind of fruit and many other.

Such wild herbal items are mixed with a sugar syrup, which they get as a residue of sweetmeats, and binni chal (a kind of rice) and made into a sweet paste. Sometimes, this paste is called Halwa too.

This Halwa is then mixed with mud and thrown into the lake. "It is mixed with mud because then it takes the fish sometime to search for the food. These herbs together gives a strong aroma, the fishes like so much," says Abdul Miah.

This is the food and as for bait they mix and eggs with bread. These and eggs are supplied mainly from Faridpur, Rajshahi and Pabna and they grow usually on mango trees. "The stringer the eggs smell the costlier they are," reports Abdul Miah.

"The water is cleaned every season with patash and carbon carbonate and is usually done by the Fishery Department but nowadays they are not very enthusiastic about the cleaning part," says Abdul Miah.

These anglers, for whom fishing is a passion and who even risk this jobs just to satisfy the urge and come fishing finds their fish alright, but only floating above the water. There should be an end to such tragedies.
