Crop output threatened

Large scale use of insecticides

From A Correspondent

BARGUNA, Apr 23: Indiscriminate use of insecticides including DDT, a banned item, is adversely affecting agricultural products and also posing a threat to the human health.

At present, insecticides under different brand names are on wide-scale use by the farmers of the district.

Insecticides are used to kill the harmful insects or pest which damage agricultural crops. Being potentially poisonous insecticides are to be used in appropriate doses. But poor and ignorant farmers not being aware of their harmful effects either use in large doses or in doses below the actual requirement, both of which contributes to ill consequences — agriculture sources said. Indiscriminate and over dose use can kill the insects which naturally control the pest population. Excess use of insecticides also can jeopardise soil contents.

Application of insecticides much below the required can lead to development of resistant varieties of pest resulting dramatic rise in pest population. Local farmers have already experienced these effects as they are to use more and more amount.

The DDT, a dangerous insecticide product is also sold in different local pesticide shops and even in some grocery shops, sources said.

Due to the hazardous effects on human health DDT was banned in many developed countries of the world and in Bangladesh, too. The DDT is used generally to control mosquitoes in malaria prone areas. But being cheaper and a little more effective than the other varieties of insecticides, poor and ignorant farmers are indiscriminately spraying it on different varieties of crops, it is learnt.

Some of the insecticides with organo-phosphorous compounds including the DDT have high biological magnification and can possibly enter into the every human tissues through different food grains. These chemicals are also highly persistent in their actions and may be carcinogenic (cancer producing property).

The residents of Patarghata Pourashava area have been plagued by a host of problems which include deplorable condition of roads, inadequate street lights, absence of proper drainage system, shortage of accommodation, lack of proper sanitary arrangement, mosquito menace, frequent power failure.

The area of the town is expanding with the increase of population but the pourashava authority has failed to provide minimum civic facilities to the town-dwellers.

Most of the roads in the pourashava area are narrow and uneven. Cracks and potholes have developed at many points on the roads. After slight rainfall, these roads become muddy and slippery.

Rainwaters remain stagnant on the roads causing difficulties to pedestrians as well as to traffic. Moreover, the road-side ditches filled with filths and garbages are not cleaned regularly and these have gradually turned into breeding centres of mosquitoes.

Absence of proper drainage system is another problem for the people of the town. During the rainy season water accumulates and remains stagnant on the roads.

Most of the streets lights in the pourashava area have no bulbs. As a result, the area plunges into darkness after sunset and the anti-social elements become active at the time.

Housing poses a great problem to the town-dwellers as construction of new houses is not in proportion to the increasing number of people.

The pitiable condition of the ordinary hotels and restaurants of the town is dangerous for public health. Adulterated foodstuffs are freely sold.

The conservancy service of the pourashava area is not satisfactory. There is no public latrine or urinal in the town areas. Most of the roads in the town are dirty and full of garbages. There is no arrangement for cleaning the roads. Apart from this, there are some places inside the pourashava area which remains full of water-hyacinth for months together.

Passengers of different parts of sadar use the stoppage of Sonapur and make their journey in different routes including Dhaka, Chittagong and other districts.

More than 50 buses make their stoppages and keep the vehicles on the roads and roadsides in haphazard manner due to lack of bus terminal causing troubles to the pedestrians and other running vehicles.

The dwellers of Noakhali pourashava have been facing a lot of problems due to lack of civic amenities including deplorable condition of roads and inadequate street lights.

Local people said most of the roads developed cracks and potholes at different points hampering the movement of pedestrians and vehicles. After a slight rainfall the roads become muddy and slippery and waters remain stagnant at several points.

Besides, most of the roads in extended area of the pourashava are narrow and uneven.

The water supply system of the town is quite inadequate with the rise in population and the supply cannot meet the increasing demand of the dwellers.
