S Arabia wants UN Off the Record arms ban on Yemen

UNITED NATIONS, May 26: Saudi Arabia's Washington ambassador is canvassing Security Council members on a resolution calling for a ceasefire in Yemen and an arms embargo imposed on its warring neighbour, reports Reuter.

Diplomats said Prince Bandar Bin Sultan spoke to ambassadors and envoys from the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China Wednesday on "clements" for a resolution.

Members treated the request with caution. But one envoy said there was a "fairly positive reaction" to a resolution or statement calling for a ceasefire and a halt of arms deliveries but not imposing a mandatory arms embargo.

Secretary-general Boutros Boutros-Ghali, at a news conference Wednesday, was a supportive of UN intervention.

In response to a question about what the United Nations had done to stop the civil war he said. "It would be necessary for a state or group of states to ask the Security Council to intervene."

"I hope that some nations will ask the United Nations to do so in order to find a peaceful settlement to that war and to establish peace in that Arab country," he added.

The war broke out May 4 when President Ali Abdullah Saleh launched a military campaign against southern Yemen after almost a year of disputes. North and South Yemen united in 1990 but differences over power sharing emerged last

"The ladies that I have talked to are extremely upset There are some daddies and husbands and brothers out there who are ready to do battle." he said.

Rieschel, the police chief and an officer confiscated the camera and four tapes Monday from Videoland, a video-rental store and tanning salon.

Rieschel said there was a two-way mirror and a camera in the upper corner of a wall.

The store was closed Wednesday and the owner, Daid Paro, could not be located for comment.

No arrests have been made. Rieschel said he had consulted with the attorney general's office but there apparently are no state laws dealing with secret videotaping. He said he checked to see if any federal laws were violated, but they don't address the situation either. "We're still looking," he said. The store offered unlimited tanning visits for 25 dollars a
