Germany's Juergen Kohler (L) and Spain's Julio Salinas in a hot pursuit to get to the ball during their Group C World Cup match at the Soldier Field Stadium in Chicago on June 21. The match ended in a 1-1 draw.

Squaring up in same quest

BOSTON, June 22: South Korea have rallied to tie a game. Now they have a golden chance for their first World Cup win against a Bolivian team shocked by the suspension of star striker Marco Etcheverry, reports AP.

Bolivia risk an early end to their first tournament appearance since 1950 unless they manage at least a draw in Thursday's game.

"We'll need some adjustments to counter their speed," Bolivian defender Miguel Angel Rimba said. "We'll try to keep possession of the ball through passing."

One weak link may be Korean goalkeeper Choi In Young, 32, who appeared slow in Friday's dramatic 2-2 tie against Spain.

South Korea have never made it out of the first round in three previous World Cup finals and are winless in 10 games at the championship. But a win at Foxboro Stadium would change that.

The Koreans will again count on speedy counter-attacks to break down the opposing defence, coach Kim Ho said.

South Korea came from two goals down against Spain in their first Group C match.

Bolivia are the group outsiders, and the Koreans can hardly count on victory in their last first-round game against defending Cup champions Germany.

On Tuesday, Germany and Spain tied 1-1, leaving the fight wide open for the qualifying spots behind the Germans.

"Time has come for an Asian team to show that we are also improving our soccer skill," said Korea Football Association Vice President Ham Heung Chul, a former national team goalkeeper.

No major changes are expected in Bolivia's lineup — except that Etcheverry, nicknamed "The Devil," will be serving the start of a two-game suspension after being sent off for a lashing kick at Lothar Matthaeus during the 1-0 opening loss to Germany.

Kim is expected to field much the same team that drew Spain, midfielder Kim Joo

Sung, who disappointed in that game, may be replaced by Seo Jung Won, who scored the last-minute equaliser against Spain.

It may be Bolivian coach Xavier Azkargorta, a 41-year-old Spaniard who was voted Bolivia's Man of the Year, who Kim fears most.

"He is a great coach and can pick up holes in the opposition very early in the game," the South Korean coach said.

Water supply, an Irish bother

SANFORD, Florida, June 22: Ireland manager Jack Charlton said on Monday his team were lodging a formal complaint with FIFA that World Cup players risked serious dehydration problems unless action was taken immediately, reports Reuters.

Charlton told a news conference that the hot conditions in the United States made it essential for players to drink water at frequent intervals during matches.

He said Irish striker Tommy Coyne had been ill through dehydration after Saturday's 1-0 victory over Italy in New Jersey. He expected the situation to be worse in Friday's game with Mexico in Orlando where conditions are more humid.

"We're not asking for any favours," said Charlton after a training session. "We just need play stopped for 10 or 15 seconds two or three times in each half to give the players water."

"That's not unreasonable. We have to be a fair to the players in temperatures like this. I'm not prepared to put my players at risk. It's frustrating when you can't do anything about it."

FIFA press officer Guido Tognoni said last week that players could drink anything they liked — "water, beer, champagne, just so long as they stay on the touchline."

Charlton said Coyne had been carried on and off the plane bringing his team back to their Florida base after the lando where conditions are more humid.

Argentina impress Matthaeus

CHICAGO, June 22: Germany's captain Lothar Matthaeus applauded the new-look, attacking Argentine side on Tuesday and said tough refereeing was helping turn the 1994 World Cup into a goalscorers' tournament, reports Reuters.

Speaking after his side's 1-1 draw with Spain in Group C, Matthaeus, who captained the Germans to their 1990 World Cup triumph, said the current finals were turning out to be "very interesting."

There was not much difference in the abilities of the 24 teams and everyone appeared determined to throw off the defensive shackles which made the 1990 finals so boring.

"I have already seen some very good players and what surprised me most was Argentina's performance," said Matthaeus, who watched the Argentine team's 4-0 defeat of Greece on Tuesday on Television.

"I am very pleased that Argentina have come out of their (1990) defensive mode and are going on the attack. Brazil also played some sensational football yesterday," he said.

Matthaeus, whose German side beat Argentina 1-0 in the 1990 World Cup final, praised the performances of the less-fancied teams such as Saudi Arabia, and also applauded international soccer's ruling body FIFA for cracking down on foul play.

"FIFA's decisions have helped attacking players, they've been good for strikers who don't have to worry about having their legs chopped away all the time. It's very positive for soccer's development," the mid-fielder-turned-sweeper said.

"Personally, I must say it would have been nice to have had these rules in place 10 years ago. As you know I've always played offensively — and I've taken a beating for it."

Despite his praise for other sides, Matthaeus said no one should make the mistake of writing off Germany despite sluggish performances in their first two matches. The world champions beat Bolivia 1-0 in the opening game.

"The teams that start strongly never become champions," Matthaeus said. "Germany typically starts slowly and gets better in each game."

Sacchi knows the score well

EAST RUTHERFORD, New Jersey, June 22: Triple champions Italy, under immense pressure after their shock defeat by Ireland, must beat Norway on Thursday to put their World Cup campaign back on track, reports Reuters.

A draw would not kill off Italy's hopes of advancing from Group E but they clearly need all three points to remove the air of despondency hanging over their camp and silence their growing band of critics.

"We have to rebuild our morale and we have little time to do it. We must avoid elimination at all costs," said coach Arrigo Sacchi.

By contrast, the Norwegians come into the game in confident and relaxed mood following their 1-0 win over Mexico on Sunday and realise the Italians are dreading the encounter.

Norway, like Ireland, play the long ball game which Italy find so hard to combat. The Norwegians have recent history on their side, having taken three points out of four from the Italians in qualifiers for the 1992 European Championships.

A shock 2-1 defeat by Norway in Oslo in June 1991 effectively cost Sacchi's predecessor Azeglio Vicini his job and the same result on Thursday would almost certainly signal the end of the line for the current incumbent.

Sacchi has picked 25 different teams in his 25 matches in charge and is sure to make changes again. His plans have been complicated by injuries to midfielder Alberigo Evani and attacker Giuseppe Signori.

Evani's pulled calf muscle means he is unlikely to play any further part in the tournament but Italy are hoping that Signori's hamstring strain responds to treatment.

Signori, if fit, will probably play on the left side of midfield with AC Milan striker Daniele Massaro partnering Roberto Baggio up front. Baggio has a sore Achilles' heel but is virtually certain to be selected.

Parma defender Antonio Benarrivo is set to replace AC Milan veteran Mauro Tassotti at right back as Sacchi tries to inject pace and zip into his team.

As before the Ireland game, the Italian coach has found plenty of words of praise for the opposition.

"Their recent results show that they are a better team than Ireland. They put you under a lot of pressure, they run hard and they are very strong in the air," Sacchi said.

PROBABLE TEAMS:

ITALY: 1-Gianluca Pagliuca, 3-Antonio Benarrivo, 4-Alessandro Costacurta, 6-Franco Baresi, 5-Paolo Maldini, 16-Roberto Donadoni, 11-Demetrio Albertini, 13-Dino Baggio, 20-Giuseppe Signori, 19-Daniele Massaro, 10-Roberto Baggio.

NORWAY: 1-Erik Thorstvedt, 20-Henning Berg, 4-Rune Bratseth, 5-Sting Inge Bjorneby, 18-Alf Inge Haaland, 22-Lars Bohinen, 7-Erik Mykland, 8-Oeyvin Diechhardsen, 11-Jahn Ivar Jakobsen, 6-Jostein Flo, 9-Jan Aage Fjortoft.

In the other match of the day, defending champions Brothers Union scored a convincing 2-0 win over Bangladesh Boys.

Bhutto and Uttam were the scorers for the winners.
