A Feverish Grip

by Iftikhar A Choudhury

While the World Cup football fever swept the entire length and breadth of this country, yet another ailment of the same generic name — but one not just in its figurative meaning — of practical nature, meaning influenza, made its unwelcome visitation. Almost all the households of the country barring only a lucky few have to be an unwilling host to this disease. Although in the last few days, like the football fever, this insistent visitor has also signalled for its departure, still one never knows when it will, without notice, make its visitation. So, be on your guard.

This short-living and seemingly innocent disease usually makes its grand entrance during the time of climatic changes. This year it has come in the months of late May-July, when the weather here seems to be of a very whimsical nature. Usually this time around an excessively hot and humid day is followed by a rainy afternoon or the vice versa. This kind of erratic weather pattern is the breeding ground of influenza.

One fine morning you go to your workplace with a radiant and happy face, then you suddenly don't seem to feel right. You have a terrible headache, you feel the temperature of your body rising, your limb-joints aching and you have a bad taste in your mouth. At last you return home with a sick and sullen face and drop down in your bed and by then you probably realise that you have been struck down with flu and you have to stay home and in bed for at least three to four days and sometimes even from a week to 10 days. "And believe me, those days are terribly hard to pass," comments one sufferer.

According to the medical jargon, "Influenza is a specific viral respiratory disease characterised by fever, common cold, cough, headache, malaise and inflammatory mucous membranes. It is a highly contagious viral infection which may turn into an epidemic within a matter of weeks. Usually, there are two types of influenza virus, A and B. There is a 24-28 hour incubation period. Influenza A and B take their grip on the human physique suddenly with a chilliness and fever, upto 102 to 104 F developing within a short time-span of 24 hours or even less, accompanied by severe cough and acute body-ache etc.

Usually after 2-4 days these acute symptoms rapidly subside. The fever may subside after 5-7 days, leaving the human body still terribly weak. This results in sweating, fatigue for days on end, even weeks. But severe cases may cause prostration, haemorrhage, pneumonia and sometimes even death.

"The problem with diseases of this sort, is that people think that you are just suffering from a simple fever and they expect you to continue all the routine works. It you are struck down with influenza, you cannot just keep on lying in your bed and take rest, which is quite essential and probably the only healer for this demon of a disease," commented one, who after ten days of suffering from the disease is yet to overcome its hangover.

Training for JMBA personnel begins

A three-week training programme on environmental management began at Bangladesh University of Engineering and Technology (BUET) for the key personnel of Jamuna Multipurpose Bridge Authority (JMBA) yesterday, reports BSS.

The programme is aimed at implementing the environmental management action plan and overcoming a number of engineering challenges at the time of completion of the single largest bridge project in the country.

Inaugurating the training programme, Communications Minister Oli Ahmed said, the JMB project profile was made with utmost caution and in consonance with the environment policy of the country and that of the development partners so that the surrounding environment does not suffer the consequence of the project.

The minister said environmental issues like the probable siltation at the northern end of the river Dhaleswari, decline in fish growth, earth-surface and sub-soil water, adverse effect on the existing flora and fauna and rehabilitation of displaced people got well throughout consideration of eminent experts at the time of taking the environment management action plan.

He said in line with the government's commitment, the training programme was organised to execute the plan by a number of trained, skilled and well conversant people in the field. Oli Ahmed, who is also Chairman of Jamuna bridge project, said "that is why an environment unit is incorporated with JMB-project."

Presided over by the Vice Chancellor of BUET Dr M. Shahjahan, the programme jointly organised by the environment unit of JMBA and the Civil Engineering Department of BUET, was also addressed by JMBA executive director Muhammad Ali, course coordinator Dr M. Firoze Ahmed, Chairman of Civil Engineering Department Dr A M M Shafiqur Rahman, a faculty member.

'Country on threshold of achieving food autarky'

Food Minister Mir Shawkat Ali yesterday reaffirmed that there was adequate stock of foodgrains in the godowns to meet future requirements and the country was on the threshold of achieving food autarky, reports UNB.

About six lakh metric tons of foodgrains were stored in the godowns and this bulk would be enhanced with the wheat from abroad which were on the pipelines, the minister said.

He was speaking as chief guest at a seminar on "Rationalisation of Freight Structure and Scheduled Rates for Public Sector Foodgrain Movement by Marine Transport" held here at the Khaddya Bhaban.

This would be adequate enough to meet the requirements of the coming days," the minister reassured and hoped that the situation would further improve with the harvesting of the next aman paddy.

"In order to maintain proper food management", Mir Shawkat observed, speedy transportation and distribution of foodgrains to every destination of the country were a must, said a PID hand-out.

To this effect a rationalised freight structure and scheduled rates for its movement by marine transports was the need of the hour as most of foodgrains were transported through water routes, he emphasised.

Engineering and Technology (BUET) presented the key-note paper.

Prof Khairul Haque Chowdhury recommended a balanced and coordinated schedule of freight rates for foodgrains movement through waterways in order to remove anomalies and lessen present cost being borne by government in this sector.
