Bad Time for Video Rental Shops

by Iftikhar A Chowdhury

With the arrival of each new consumer item, the former versions of the same category experience a sharp decline in popularity. Probably, this is not the case with consumer items alone. In this highly materialistic world, it is perhaps the ultimate fate with almost anything. Where man's insatiable hunger for power, property and status has become a second nature, this kind of phenomena is not very unlikely.

After the introduction of the Cable TV, of which most middle and high income urban families have become subscribers, the video rental business has been going through hard times. These video rental shops, which experienced a thriving business even a couple of years back are now on the verge of packing their trade. Some of the city's small and medium-sized video rental shops are seriously giving a thought to investing their money in other lucrative trades where the return will not be as dismal as they are receiving from it at present.

Nasim, the proprietor of a video rental shop at Mirpur Road near Dhanmondi R/A, nostalgically recalls that once there was a time when the number of Video Cassette Recorders (VCRs) were few and far between in Dhaka. One even went to the houses of half-acquainted people to see a Hindi or English film. When the prices of VCRs and VCPs became relatively affordable, people began to buy them and video cassette rental shops had a booming business.

"Many youths between the age of 18-25 who wasted an ample amount of their time in Topi-follery or had a deep inclination towards the filmy darya tip-toed into this business and even became successful," says Nasim, "and this, in a way, helped organise the lives of many youths who were thought to be wasteful elements of the society".

The customers of these video rentals were mostly eager to see Hindi and Indian Bengali films both old and new. The viewers of English movies were always negligible in comparison to their Hindi and Bengali counterparts. But now a large number among the target viewers have become subscribers of Cable TV and in two of the channels of the Cable TV, namely Doordarshan and Zee TV — they see at least two Hindi films and sometimes one Bengali film daily. So, these two channels have pulled a lot of customers away from the video shops. For obvious reasons, they no longer want to pay for viewing a film which they can see almost free of cost.

The marginal video rental shops in various localities of the city, therefore, are barely able to exist in this trade. "Now most people who come to rent Hindi or Bengali video cassettes want the latest released film which is yet to be screened on those two channels. So, we have to keep as many copies of the newly released films we can get hold of," says a video rental owner.

With profound bitterness tinged with a sense of helplessness he goes on to say that they also used to have a formidable collection of English feature films.

"But you see, people who mostly watch English movies do not always come to us for these. Because we are mainly small and medium fries in this business they cannot fully rely on our taste in choosing good English films. They are subscribers of one or two selected video rentals of the city. So, what's left in this business for us now?" he asks.

That the small and medium video libraries are experiencing a down-trend in their business is very true. The other side of the story is that, in a sense, although unfortunate for the men in this trade, for the customers, it is a kind of blessing in disguise. Because as soon as this business becomes competitive enough, people catering to these video rentals will, no doubt receive better service from them. Quality, after all, improves with hardship.

'Social homogeneity in Bangladesh favourable for foreign investment'

Industries Minister A M Zahiruddin Khan yesterday said Bangladesh is the only homogeneous country in the subcontinent and it must take this advantage for the promotion of national economy through political consensus, reports BSS.

"Due to the social homogeneity, Bangladesh is in a very advantageous position towards attaining political consensus and ensuring the economic development," he said.

Khan said this at the inaugural function of a Japan-Bangladesh joint enterprise, Ishiyari Dry Cleaning Limited at Uttara.

Special envoy to the Prime Minister M Morshed Khan, Secretary of IRD and Chairman of Board of Revenue Dr Ali Akbar Khan and Japanese Charge de Affaires Yoshihisa Kuroda also spoke on the occasion while the chairman of the enterprise Sharif Afzal Hossain presided.

Reviewing the country's economic situation, the minister said the purchasing power parity of Bangladesh is 1206 compared to 1196 in neighbouring India which shows the country's economic potential.

The setting up of joint venture industries and foreign investment in the country's share market also indicate that Bangladesh has earned the confidence of foreign entrepreneurs, he said.

Morshed Khan stressed the need for business innovations particularly in the service sector and welcoming foreign investment in this regard.

He said the present government has taken up various measures including reduction of taxes and duties to facilitate the growth of the private sector. A task force has also been formed recently by the Prime Minister to provide more facilities to the industrial and import-export sectors, he said.

Speaking on the occasion Japanese envoy Kuroda said the setting up of this dry cleaning company with Japanese collaboration is the outcome of the Prime Minister Begum Khaleda Zia's recent visit to Japan which made the Japanese entrepreneurs encouraged to invest in Bangladesh. He also referred to the recent visit of the high-powered Japanese business delegation, Keidanren mission, and expressed his hope that more Japanese investors would be interested to invest in Bangladesh after this visit.

Kamrun's solo painting show begins

By Staff Correspondent

The third solo painting exhibition of Kamrun Nahar began yesterday at the La Galerie, 54 Kemal Ataturk Avenue, at Banani in the city.

Canadian High Commissioner in Bangladesh Jon J Scott inaugurated the week-long show at a simple ceremony.

Fortyfive recent works of the artist in oil, water colour and batik have been put on display. The exhibition will remain open to the visitors from 9 am to 8 pm everyday (till August 7).

Inaugurating the show, the High Commissioner said Kamrun Nahar is a painter of great promise and tremendous potentials. "She looks at nature in all its majesty and beauty with the eyes of a Bengalee without the influence of the West as such."

Yet when it comes to technique, she leans towards cosmopolitan trends but with caution and care," he said.

Recalling late SM Ali's comment on the first exhibition of the artist, Scott said, "he also said that she is not an artist of ivory tower."

"She probably puts her children to bed and leaves the light on in the living room for her journalist husband who comes home late after finishing his night duty, somehow she finds time to devote to her art," Scott quoted SM Ali as saying.

Kamrun Nahar organised her first solo exhibition in February last year.

A mother of two, Kamrun did her BFA from the Institute of Fine Arts, Dhaka University, in 1980. Currently she is working as a senior designer with a leading advertising firm.
