Drought-like situation threatens Aman crop

By Inam Ahmed

Is a drought impending? This has now become the main concern of the country's farmers and agriculture experts.

The threat of a drought looms large over the country's northern region unless there is a significant increase in rainfall in the next few days, agriculturists feel.

They are now anxiously looking at the skies in the hope of torrential showers that will enable them to transplant their aman paddy seedlings.

Unless the rainfall increases by 30 to 40 per cent from the current level, 20 per cent of the transplanted aman would not survive without supplementary irrigation," said Dr

Z Karim, Member (Spill) of the Bangladesh Agricultural Research Council (BARC), while talking to The Daily Star.

"If the rain comes, the area under aman plantation would not shrink. But then we have to watch for the month of September because usually droughts come after the middle of September. So we can't really have a sigh of relief before that," he said.

A weather expert told The Daily Star last night: "The northern region is virtually dry now."

Meanwhile, out of the 50 lakh-hectare aman plantation target this year, 9.86 lakh hectares were brought under plantation till July 31, according to Agriculture Ministry sources.

The plantation season began in July and will continue till the last week of August. The achievement till the end of July is, however, only five per cent lower than the slightly over 10 lakh hectares last year.

During the same period this year, 2.55 lakh hectares of seed beds were prepared compared to last year's 2.59 lakh hectares.

But the most striking feature this year has been the fact that almost two lakh hectares of the total 9.86 lakh hectares were brought under plantation only with the help of irrigation.

"This is unimaginable," said an official on condition of

Israel and Jordan open border crossing

ISRAEL-JORDAN BORDER, Aug 8: Israel and Jordan changed the map of the Middle East today, opening their first border crossing to cement an end to 46 years of hostilities, report Reuters, AP.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Jordan's Crown Prince Hassan cut the ribbon at the border crossing three km north of the Red Sea ports of Aqaba in Jordan and Eilat in Israel.

US Secretary of State Warren Christopher watched as an "announcer told the assembled crowd: 'Ladies and gentlemen, the border crossing between Israel and Jordan is now open.'"

Speaking in Hebrew, only one remarkable development here where minefields were cleared up to the last minute,

Hassan quoted from the Bible, saying the events were "turning the valley of troubles into a gate of hope."

Rabin, the first Israeli head of government to officially set foot on Jordanian soil, and Christopher, shared the rostrum with Hassan as some 1,000 Israelis and Jordanians sat together in a wooden grandstand. They wore white baseball caps to protect them from scorching heat.

"This is the first step on a long journey," Rabin said, as he quarrelled with critics who questioned the rapid pace of Israel's deal-cutting with the Arabs. "To prevent loss and sorrow we cannot afford to wait one day longer."

A dozen Jordanian and Israeli war veterans shook hands and exchanged gifts. Two young girls, Zora Ginzburg, 10, a Kibbutz child, and Nancy Tayan, 12, of Aqaba, presented shears on velvet pillows for Rabin and Hassan to cut the white ceremonial ribbon.

The border opening, which cannot be used by Israelis and Jordanians until there is a formal peace treaty, is one byproduct of the war-no-more agreement King Hussein and Rabin signed two weeks ago at the White House in Washington.

Christopher, who is in the midst of another burst of shuttle diplomacy to try to broaden the 'peacemaking', said the event lifts the spirits of a wounded region by reminding it of the courage and honour, the compassion and sacrifice that two people can demon-

BNP steps up efforts to end impasse

Star Report

The ruling Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP) has stepped up its efforts to resolve the present political impasse, party sources said last night.

The mass campaign highlighting the achievements of the BNP government would continue alongside efforts to bring the boycotting Opposition back to Parliament, a senior BNP leader said.

The 16th session of the Jatiya Sangsad is likely to be convened by the end of this month.

The BNP leader, who is also a minister, said so far mid-level leaders of the two major parties have held informal talks. "If the talks between these leaders make progress, the top-ranking leaders would sit to finalise matters," he told The Daily Star.

He, however, admitted that not much progress has so far been made.

The major Opposition parties — the Awami League, the Jatiya Party and Jamaat — have been agitating for holding the next general elections under a caretaker government.

"We can discuss the outline of a caretaker government but the ruling party should first agree to the caretaker provision," an AL leader said.

Talking to The Daily Star, both the BNP and the Opposition leaders could not give any clear-cut idea about formal talks to end the political

Froglegs worth Tk 7.5cr to be destroyed

By Special Correspondent

The government has ordered immediate destruction of the frogleg stocks in the country to ensure strict enforcement of the ban, imposed several years ago, on its export.

The National Board of Revenue (NBR) has already been instructed to take necessary actions in this regard, said official sources.

Over 5.63 lakh pounds of processed froglegs worth about seven crore 50 lakh taka, belonging to six private companies, are now stored in various warehouses. Of this stock, over 35 thousand pounds are in possession of a private company while the rest are in bonded warehouses under supervision of the Customs Department.

This huge quantity of the froglegs has been reportedly lying in the warehouses since 10 November, 1991, when the deadline for exporting the remaining stock of the commodity expired.

The catching and killing of frogs of all species as well as export of froglegs were banned by the government on 12 June 1988. The step was taken for maintaining bio-diversity, ecological balance and the environment in the country, in line with the international protocol and agreements signed by Bangladesh.

However, the ban was later lifted due to pressure from certain quarters and the deadline for exporting the remaining stock of froglegs was re-fixed several times.

In January, 1991, the stock lying with 25 frogleg exporters was estimated at over 24 lakh pounds. The final deadline to

WASA yet to respond to their plight

By Asiuzzaman

"If I pump my tubewell, fitted with the WASA line, I get dirty, stinking water. Possibly the water and sewerage lines have leakages somewhere in the area," said a resident of Baddanagar Lane under Lalbagh thana in the city.

Despite repeated complaints during the past one month, the Dhaka Water and Sewerage Authority (WASA) is yet to check the lines and restore supply of fresh water, he told The Daily Star yesterday.

"We fetch our drinking water from a roadside hydrant," he said, pointing to a long queue near the faucet.

At least 50 families in the area have been suffering without any sign of a solution to the problem. "The water flow is so poor that we have to use tubewells to draw water from the WASA line," he further said.

Shujauddin, a banker residing in the area, said "Poor supply or scarcity is tolerable but how can we drink highly contaminated water?" Some people have already fallen sick due to this, he said.

A Daily Star correspondent and a photographer visited the area and saw the suffering of the local people.

Another resident, Abdul
